FRENCH REPLY ON ARMS LIMIT IS NOT FINAL

Nation Does Not Object to Idea of Limiting Armament of Navies

OBJECTION TO METHOD

Believe France Will Agree to Special Committee of League at Geneva

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, Feb. 17, 1927. (AP)—The American proposal for a conference on naval disarmament is regarded here as permitting further discussion. It is significantly observed that France did not object to the idea of limiting naval armament so much as to the method of approaching the subject.

Inasmuch as the delegates now at Geneva, including those of the United States, are gathered under the auspices of the league of nations, the contention of France that the whole disarmament question be considered by the league commission instead of by a special conference invites its possible for the United States to clarify her views. The American government has not been trying to set up a rival conference but simply desires that a section of the Geneva conference give its attention to naval armament.

PROBLEM OF PROCEDURE

Thus the problem becomes one of procedure. Will France object to the American proposal for a conference on naval armament and bringing in a report to the whole disarmament conference so that ultimately land and air and sea armament can be considered as a unit? While the final consent of France to a naval agreement might be withheld until she can determine what shall be done on land and air armament, there can be little objection offered to a parley in the meantime on auxiliary naval vessels.

In other words, if the French objection is merely as to the method it can be overcome. If the French do not want any naval reduction then nothing can be done by the United States to conform to the French ideas of procedure will be of avail. There is talk here that Great Britain, Japan and the United States might go ahead and discuss a 5-5-3 plan for auxiliary ships and after an agreement has been reached approach France with the hope of getting an agreement for a proportionate limitation. Italy's attitude is inclined to be affected by that of France but if the three big naval powers agree the feeling here is that the opinion of the world will compel the other naval powers to come into line.

CONSIDER THREE PROBLEMS

France's insistence that the three problems—land, sea and air—be considered as a unit is regarded here as logical, in fact President Coolidge in his memorandum to the powers reiterated his sympathy with the plan of the league of nations to consider which now is preparing a program for a general disarmament conference. The United States is prepared to go along with the league members on this score but sees no chance of immediate agreement where the possibility of an extension of the Washington treaty with respect to naval armament of the three big powers is a good one.

The whole episode illustrates the difference between a carefully planned program on which the powers were sounded out in advance, as in 1921, and the sending of invitations publicly without chance of informal discussion. The American government, however, was compelled to act precipitately so as to stop further expenditure at this session of congress on the three naval cruisers. Japan's attitude as reflected in official announcements is fairly indicative of nations to suspend construction or appropriations until an agreement is reached, a circumstance which may affect the congress here and prevent the president from winning his battle with the naval expansionists.

SALESMAN ROBBED OF $35,000 IN MILWAUKEE

Milwaukee—(AP)—A sneak thief, supposedly aided by an accomplice, stole between $30,000 and $35,000 worth of watches from a salesman's trunk in a night. The watches were the property of the Gruen Watch Co., Cincinnati, and were in the custody of Robert Herrmann, a salesman. They were in a collapsible trunk and numbered about 500 some of them in diamond and jewel studded cases. Mr. Herrmann was absent from his room when the thieves supposedly picked the lock on the door.

Detectives traced the men to the North Shore depot where they boarded a train. An alarm was sent to North Shore City and the first results of it came from Racine. Detectives there learned that two men got off a North Shore train and engaged a cab driver to take them to Chicago and paid $30 in advance for their fare.

They are trying to find the taxi-driver to learn where he dropped his customers and pick up the trail from there.

DON'T TRY TO LOOK INTO OCCULT, MAYO ADVISES UNIVERSITY

Minneapolis—(AP)—Investigation of the occult carries distinct dangers to integrity of thought, for it loosens the mind from the moorings of fact, gives predominance to the lesser senses, and creates emotional disturbances, Dr. William J. Mayo of Rochester, declared Thursday at the charter day convocation of the University of Minnesota.

In a paper "the place of the senses in the development of science," read before the convocation, Dr. Mayo stated that the devotion of a life to the study of psychic phenomena "is one thing, but as a side line is dangerous."

"Anybody dabbling in the occult, deliberately depriving himself of vision, man's chief means of obtaining information, injures himself mentally," Dr. Mayo declared.

HOUSE REFUSES TO SUBSTITUTE BILL FOR FARM RELIEF

Turns Down Aswell Measure
by Vote of 160 to 144 in Favor of McNary Bill

BULLETIN

Washington—(AP)—Pushing towards a final vote on the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill, the house Thursday rejected in rapid order the Aswell and Curtis-Crisp measures which were offered as substitutes.

Washington, D. C.—(AP)—The house Thursday refused to substitute the Aswell farm relief bill for the McNary-Haugen measure. The vote against substitution was 160 to 144.

Although a second vote on the Aswell bill may come later Thursday's action narrowed the fight more closely between the Curtis-Crisp bill and the McNary-Haugen measure, and gave the first preliminary test of strength as between two of the rival bills. There was no record vote. Representative Crisp, Democrat, Georgia, next moved substitution of the bill bearing his name.

Representative Garrett of Tennessee, the Democratic leader, supported the Aswell substitution, declaring many members in supporting the McNary-Haugen bill were submerging their own convictions.

Attacking the Haugen bill as a vicious piece of legislation, he said, "every man who votes for the equalization fee, which threatens to destroy all agriculture will be on the defense as soon as it becomes effective."

GOVERNOR MAY ACT TO REMOVE IMMEL

Madison Dispatch Says Zimmerman Looks for Defect in Appointment

Milwaukee—(AP)—A special Madison dispatch to the Journal Thursday says that Governor Fred R. Zimmerman will remove Ralph M. Immel, adjutant general of the Wisconsin National Guard, if he can find any legal defect in his appointment by Governor Blair in 1925.

The governor has addressed a letter to Attorney General John Reynolds in which he submitted three questions bearing on the status of the "boy general" who was elevated from the position of the governor's executive to command of the national guard.

The story says that while declining to comment on the possibility of Immel's removal, the governor admitted his letter to the attorney general indicated that some change was contemplated.

OFFER 1,200 BILLS IN LEGISLATURE

Bill Would Make U. W. Law Students Take State Test

Madison—(AP)—The worth of a bar examination, as a test which would permit graduate law students to practice their profession, was assailed in a senate committee meeting here Wednesday night.

The original purpose of the meeting to discuss a bill introduced by Assemblyman Barney Spott, Milwaukee, asking that all graduates be forced to take upon 200 or more bar examinations, developed into a controversy of the right of Wisconsin university students to practice without taking the examination in comparison to the statute insisting students of Marquette university pass the test.

Phil LaFrance, former district attorney, pleaded with committee members that they would not decide any action until they were fully acquainted with the circumstances such action would involve.

He took no obvious side in the issue other than stating "a committee cannot make a decision on a bill in a few days session in as fair and efficient manner as those professors who had worked with the students for a number of years."

Professor John M. Fox, Marquette university, was the only speaker in favor of the bill. Dean H. S. Richards, University of Wisconsin, objected contending that "students would not work for true legal training but more towards a goal, that of passing a bar examination."

DEMAND RESTORATION OF PROPERTY OFFSET

Lumbermen Want 1 Per Cent
Reduction in Federal Corporation Tax

Milwaukee—(AP)—Restoration of the personal property offset on state taxes and a reduction of 1 per cent in the federal corporation tax are asked in two resolutions passed at the conclusion of the Wisconsin lumbermen's association convention Thursday.

All officers were reelected. The state taxation on both income and personal property is classed as "burdensome, excessive and in fact double taxation," in one resolution. The other says that the federal government in reducing individual income taxes had raised the corporation taxes from 12 1/2 to 13 1/2 per cent, costing the business men of the country $100,000,000 annually. It asks that this tax be brought back to the 12 1/2 per cent basis.

Officers are Hlawley W. Wilbur, Milwaukee, president; J. H. Brannum, Racine, treasurer; and D. S. Montgomery, secretary. Directors named for four year terms are C. H. Hill, Beloit, and C. H. Werden, Mason.

"CAPTIVE" TO REAPPEAR UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT

New York—(AP)—The entire cast of "The Captive," raided Broadway play, has enrolled themselves in the ranks of a new producer, Horace Liveright, publisher, for performances in defiance of police mandate.

Liveright announced his intentions after four members of the cast were freed of charges of producing an immoral play on their premises. The production would close. Charges were also withdrawn against the men who have been producing the play.

Liveright's announcement prompted a new declaration of war from prompting Mayor McKee. "We will meet that challenge," he said. "If Mr. Liveright attempts to put on that show he and every member of his cast will be placed under arrest."

Plans for obtaining a protective injunction are being considered. Liveright announced "The Captive" would reopen Monday.

MEXICAN RAILROAD MEN THREATEN STRIKE

Mexico City—(AP)—A general railway strike again appears imminent in Mexico. Midnight Thursday is the time set for a walkout. A conference between railroad men and National Railway lines, called by the department of industry to find a solution of the differences between the men and the company, failed to materialize. The National Lines believe the strike, if it is called will fail, saying several unions have decided not to join the movement. On the other hand, the federation of transport workers announces all railway unions will present a solid front.

TOTAL IS 190 MORE THAN IN 1925 SESSION

Senate and Assembly Run
Close Race in Number
Introduced Last Day

BULLETIN

Madison—(AP)—After a long debate and a brief "call to the house" the assembly Thursday passed the joint resolution of Alvin C. Reis, Madison, providing for an election on the initiative and referendum. Assemblyman Ingalls, Lawson, Peterson and Ungrodt, the latter in his first speech in the assembly attacked the measure which would submit to a vote of the people the proposal that under petition, the electorate be privileged to initiate legislation.

Madison—(AP)—Midnight brought a halt to the introduction of bills in both branches of Wisconsin's legislature, but not before the solons had surpassed by 190 the number presented before the 1925 session.

The senate and assembly ran a close race in the number of bills introduced the last day, beginning Wednesday morning and ending at midnight Wednesday, with 260 in the upper house and an equal number in the lower branch. The total number of bills in both houses introduced since the opening of the session was placed at 1,200.

In the last minute rush scores of bills were introduced by title only, the body of the bills to be added later. Close checks may bring the number of last-day bills in the assembly to 270, it was said. Since the opening of the senate, 400 bills have been introduced.

BILL ON WAGES

Another bill that came under the wire a few minutes before midnight would require all employers in the state to pay employees weekly, with the exception of farmers. Assemblyman Coleman, Milwaukee, author of the bill, explained that the measure would provide for the weekly payment of everworker in Wisconsin, with farm help the sole exception.

A joint resolution introduced by Assemblyman Duncan to amend the state constitution raising the compensation of legislators to $1,000 was passed and as a result the people of the state will be called upon to vote on the question.

Another joint resolution by the same assemblyman, providing for the classification of forests and mineral lands by the legislature in relation to taxation, was also passed. Both measures were approved almost unanimously. The latter also goes to the people for vote.

Under the present law, taxation of forests and mineral lands is on an equality basis but certain exemptions would be provided under the terms of the resolution in comparison to other lands.

The assembly also passed a resolution thanking the members of the Wisconsin delegation in congress for their support of the Lenroot Dairy bill preventing the importation of dairy products which do not meet the requirements of the United States products. The resolution originally named Senator Lenroot but after debate the Wisconsin senator's name was ordered omitted and the "delegation" clause was substituted.

In the senate a bill by Senator Boldt, Sheboygan Falls recommended by the interim committee and providing for nonresident tuition at state normal schools was passed.

Dog, Entombed 110 Hours Leaps Into Master's Arms

Woodruff, S. C.—(AP)—"Ring," a little dog held fast by rocks in a narrow underground passageway for 110 hours, walked from his prison just before dawn and bounded into the arms of his master with tail wagging furiously.

Twenty men who through the night had worked with pick and shovel, dug out the dog. He was found in a hole, crawled into the passageway at 3:45. They did not see Willie as he made his way 30 feet to where the dog was lodged nor could they watch him as he pulled the little animal free with an iron hook.

They saved him a moment later though, for the dog bounded past Willie and out into the open. Twenty hands went up and shouts split the countryside as P. V. Kelly, bachelor farmer, gathered "Ring" into his arms and wrapped his overcoat about him.

It was a happy cavalcade that quit the scene. Kelly careful that "Ring" was comfortable in his arms, carried the pet home for some hot milk, the first meal for the dog since last Thursday when he chased a fox into the passageway and became imprisoned. The fox was removed Wednesday dawn. "Ring" had killed it.

News of the rescue preceded the land into the dark quiet little town. Shafts of light framed neighbors who opened doors to hear the tidings. "Ring," a friend of the community, had become a popular concern in his predicament.

The rescuers were to gather at the scene of the rescue later in the day to pose for a motion picture camera man.

Nemachek And Weymouth Testify In Roac Probe

Madison—(AP)—The engineering and executive ability of John T. Donaghey and his trustworthiness in the office of chief state highway engineer was questioned by two witnesses before the joint legislative investigating committee here Wednesday night.

J. T. Nemachek, recently appointed as one of the highway commissioners, who styled himself as "retired culvert peddler," and C. H. Weymouth, testified in turn that Donaghey was engineer-secretary of the commission, dismissed by the commission after a series of complaints from county and district highway engineers that their chief was engaged in politics, was erratic in his decisions and unsuited temperamentally to the position.

Mr. Nemachek, who was in the highway commission, charged by a road culvert company, charged with having connections in the commission, declared he had severed connections with the company, and that although he intended to find additional work to make up the minimum remuneration he would receive as a highway commissioner, he did not intend to take a position with any company connected in any way with road work.

STATE GETS OFFER IN BEGG'S TAX CASE

Attorney General Announces
$1,225,000 Offered in Settlement of Suit

Madison—(AP)—The attorney general's office announced Thursday that an offer of $1,225,000 settlement in the John I. Beggs inheritance tax controversy had been made to three attorneys representing the state in the case involving the collection of $1,300,000 in inheritance and income taxes.

The attorneys are Robert W. Theodore Kronslage and John Poss, all of Milwaukee, who were appointed by former Governor John J. Blaine and former Attorney General Herman L. Ekern.

John W. Reynolds, attorney general, said that a conference was held several days ago at which the offer was made. He also stated that he did not know whether the state would accept the amount, in view of the fact that the matter would have to be litigated through the courts.

The state has claimed the estate of the Milwaukee traction magnate was worth $25,000,000 and sought $1,600,000 in inheritance taxes. The estate was appraised by executors at approximately $14,000,000. The state of Missouri recently agreed to accept $500,000 as full payment on the $200,000 worth of property held by Beggs in that state.

Property Loss Probably Will Run into Millions, Es- timate States

20 CITIES ARE FLOODED

Menace Still Unabated, at Many Points in Worst
Storm in History

San Francisco—(AP)—Despite confusion and roar of high water, flood-stricken southern California Thursday turned an eye toward growing totals of death and destruction as the result of the worst storm in the history, while thousands of its besieged citizens sought refuge from a menace still unabated.

With the known death toll standing at 21, property losses from rain, snow and wind, which has beset the southland by a precedent violence of four days, probably will total several million dollars. Up to early Thursday 5,000 persons had been driven from their homes.

A survey late Wednesday night made up from reports received over limited lines of communication showed at least 20 cities had been partly or wholly deluged, seven of them badly. Damage to bridges alone in Los Angeles was estimated at $1,000,000.

San Diego stood in imminent danger of a catastrophic flood for several hours Wednesday night and early Thursday, but the waters finally receded to below the danger point. At Whittier engineers were considering a plan to dynamite a Santa Fe railroad bridge there to lessen the danger because the structure had "been holding back the roaring 'overflow' of rain standing by there," evacuated the headquarters of Marshal Sun Chuan-fang's defending army.

Cantonese forces were only 10 miles from Hangchow Thursday morning, lying up on the south and west approaches to the city and pressing hard on the retreating northern army. Confirmation of the city's fall was expected momentarily as it may already have fallen.

INDIANS ASK MORE POLICE PROTECTION

Demand That Government
Vindicate Chippewa Tribe
in Murders

Ashland—(AP)—Chief and headmen, members of the Bad river, or LaPointe, band of Chippewa Indians, Thursday morning presented a petition signed, in some cases with thumb prints, by 12 of the leaders, to the reservation superintendent and asked that copies of it be sent to the secretary of the interior and to the commissioner of Indian affairs. The petition, in brief, asks for two more paid police officers for night duty, to stop the crime wave mostly from the lack of police protection. "The petition also says the 'United States government is morally obligated or duty bound by treaties to give us the needed protection.'"

In a statement accompanying the petition the Indians ask for money to pay for the Chippewa tribe from responsibility for the murder of Mr. Marks, and for other crimes committed recently.

COUNCIL STARTS BALL ROLLING TO GET TOOL HOUSE

Aldermen Eager to Provide Proper Housing for Street
Department Equipment

Definite action to procure a tool house for the street department was started at the meeting of the common council Wednesday evening. The matter was brought to the attention of the aldermen by Mayor A. C. Rule and after a long discussion a resolution was adopted authorizing the mayor to call the members of the council to a special committee next week to consider the matter. The committee will visit the various buildings proposed to be purchased and converted into a tool house and will discuss ways and means of getting the necessary funds to procure such a building.

"For some time past," Mayor Rule said in bringing the matter before the council, "there has been a very decided demand for a tool house and I think we all realize the need for such a building. At one time it was proposed to build a tool house on the city property near the present barns on S. Walnut-st. The council authorized an architect to draw plans for a building that would cost in the neighborhood of $25,000.

COST TOO MUCH
"Before the plans were completed it was found that the building as designed would cost closer to $50,000 than to $25,000. The plan fell through. Now, in addition to building a new structure which would cost anywhere from $25,000 to $50,000 we have two other propositions which we can consider. We can buy the Reliance truck plant at 924 W. Spencer-st., which according to the attorney in charge of the building, could not be purchased for a penny less than $45,000. There is the Langstadt-Meyer company building on E. Washington-st. which could be purchased for $65,000.

"Of the three plans," Mayor Rule said, "if we cannot put up a building for less than $45,000 or if we cannot buy the Reliance truck building for less than $45,000 I would favor the purchase of the Langstadt-Meyer building for $65,000."

The mayor then pointed out that the Langstadt-Meyer building was four stories high, equipped with a large elevator and that some of the upper floors could be used for the water department or for any other office which there might be need. He said that in addition to the building the city would receive approximately 69 feet of land on each side of the structure which was a full block long between Washington and Morrison-sts.

TIME TO ACT
Alderman Charles Fosse, chairman of the street and bridges committee, said he thought a new building could be erected for about $35,000. "But, what pleases me," he said, "is the fact that at last the council is awakening to the fact that a tool house is so badly needed."

"For some years I have been agitating and trying to show the council how badly this building was needed and it now looks as if some definite action will be taken. I don't care what you do but get us a street department tool house."

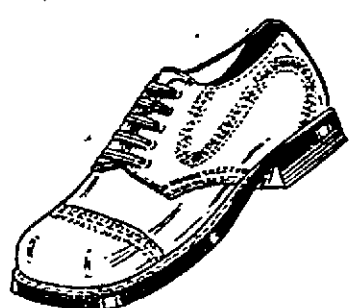

Alderman Mike Steinhauer then made a strenuous address in which he stated that he had never seen an inventory of the city's street equipment and if there is one he didn't believe he would find half the material that has been purchased in the last 10 years. Alderman Steinhauer demanded action be taken at this time. He said there was no method at present of keeping a check on the street department equipment and that a tool house was badly needed. He said he favored the purchase of the Langstadt-Meyer building.

R. F. Hackworthy, street commissioner declared he did keep an inventory of the street equipment and to prove it he would produce the inventory.

Alderman C. F. Smith said he favored the purchase of the Reliance Truck building and he suggested that the council investigate the building. Alderman McGillan suggested both buildings be examined before any action was taken.

Alderman Mark Catlin praised the council for "its sudden optimistic spirit," but he wanted to know where the money will come from.

IF BACK HURTS BEGIN ON SALTS

Flush Your Kidneys Occasionally by Drinking Quarts of Good Water

No man or woman can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Too much rich food creates acids which clog the kidney pores so that they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the wastes and poisons from the blood. Then you get sick. Rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders often come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage, or attended by a sensation of scalding, begin to drink soft water in quantities; also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine.

This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity; also to help neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer cause irritation, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everyone can take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby often preventing serious kidney complications.

Legislators Swamp Clerks With Avalanche Of Bills

Titus Wants Part of Inheritance Taxes Transferred to School Fund

Madison—(P)—Senate clerks were buried Wednesday beneath an avalanche of bills, resolutions, and petitions. No attempt was made to clear the desks until 12 o'clock last night when "deadline" for introduction of bills was reached.

Senator Titus, Fond du Lac, introduced a bill which would transfer a portion of the receipts from inheritance taxes to the common school fund. All inheritance tax money paid into the treasury in excess of one million dollars will be immediately transferred to the educational fund.

Senator Southoff, Madison, would eliminate the jury trial in committing insane persons to asylums. His bill to that effect, provided for a trio of physicians to be appointed by the clerk of the court, which would pass upon the question of sanity.

An attempt to make it easier for cities to reorganize under the city manager plan was made in a bill offered by Senator Laue, Eau Claire, permitting cities of the second, third and fourth class to change their plan of government either through the enactment of a charter ordinance or by petition and referendum election.

CREATE ANOTHER JOB
A long involved bill which would consolidate all the various motor vehicle departments of the state into one organization under the direction of a "State Vehicle Commissioner," was introduced by Senator Caspersen, Frederic. This new department would take care of license fees, gas tax refunds, registering of cars, etc.

Senator Morris, Milwaukee, offered a bill which would give any city the right to appropriate money to advertise its advantages as a residence or business location. The appropriations would be made to organizations organized for that purpose and expended under direction of the council.

The committee of education and public welfare recommended that county boards be authorized to organize county health departments and employ a health officer and assistants, whose powers would equal those of local health officers.

PENSIONS FOR WARDENS
A bill relating to pension for conservation wardens was introduced by Senator Barker, Antigo. A pension fund would be made up out of witness fees received by the wardens, fines imposed upon them and 3 per cent of their monthly salaries.

In a joint resolution introduced by Senator Hull, Whitewater, the senate was asked to allow taxes to be decreased upon agricultural lands, if the lands were being taxed for school purposes.

Another bill by Senator Southoff would simplify the registration system in cities of more than 5,000 population. The bill asked that a registry of voters be made prior to all elections and primaries instead of each even numbered year.

The senate committee considering a tuition for non-resident, normal school students recommended such a measure be passed.

The Ingalls resolution would have one committee do this work, while the Reis resolutions would name a separate committee for forest investigation and the water power probe.

GIRL SEEKS $5,000 FROM WOMAN DRIVER FOR HER INJURIES

Testimony in Case of Block Against Seibol Is Finished Wednesday

Testimony in the case of Dorothy Block against Mrs. Sarah Seibol, both of Appleton, commenced Wednesday morning in the higher branch of municipal court before a jury of 12 men, was completed late in the afternoon. The case went to the jury Thursday morning.

Dorothy Block, by her guardian, William Block, is suing Mrs. Seibol for $5,000 for injuries she alleges she received when struck by automobile driven by the defendant Sept. 14, 1926, at the corner of W. Wisconsin and N. Superior-st.

The plaintiff alleges that Mrs. Seibol drove negligently in that she was traveling rapidly, failed to sound her horn, and failed to slow down as she approached the street intersection. The accident happened at about 7:45 in the morning.

The negligence allegations are denied by the defendant. She contends she was driving slowly, that she sounded her horn as she neared the corner, and that she slowed down to about 15 miles an hour shortly before she reached the crossing.

Dorothy was walking south on the east side of N. Superior-st. and Mrs. Seibol was driving her car west on W. Wisconsin-ave.

Mrs. Seibol maintains that she saw Dorothy walking toward Wisconsin-ave, but that despite the fact that she sounded her horn, Dorothy, after looking to the right and left, continued on her way across Wisconsin-ave. The defendant adds that she immediately applied her brakes and swung her car sharply to the left, but that the girl, who is 16 years old, darted in the same direction and was struck by the right front wheel of the automobile. Mrs. Seibol immediately stopped and gave aid to the girl, she maintains.

The jury in the case are: V. P. Niles, 609 S. Sherry-st; James Whelan, 16 Belmont-st; James Vanderheiden, 118 Calumet-st; Otto Ehke, 1411 N. Appleton-st; Alex. Monyette, 209 S. State-st; C. V. Art, 306 E. S. River-st; E. Maurer, 515 S. Walnut-st; Julius Krause, Jr., 214 S. Mason-st; Charles J. F. Bloomer, 733 W. Fifth-st., Wednesday reported to police that a Good-year balloon tire, carried on his automobile as a spare, was stolen between 8:15 and 10:30 Tuesday night while the car was parked on E. Franklin-st. between N. Morrison and N. Onida-sts. The rim and a tire cover were taken with the tire. Although the tire was locked to the carrier with a chain, the thief broke the chain.

Needs Support of Townspeople to Pay Bills for Basketball Meet

Menasha—The local high school and city will entertain eight teams from this part of the state at the sectional basketball tournament to be held at the local armory on the afternoons and evenings of Thursday, Friday and Saturday, March 10, 11 and 12.

In accepting the tournament for Menasha, the local school assumes the responsibility of taking care of all expenses such as hall rent, prizes, advertising, tickets, ticket takers, janitor service, officials, expense of local manager, sanction fee, and balls.

After guaranteed expenses have been paid the money taken in is to be spent as follows: Each out of town team is to be allowed a certain amount per day for hotel expenses; each team is to be allowed train fare, nearest railway distance, for nine men; balance or net proceeds to be divided equally between local school and the board of control.

In no case is the amount to be allowed competing teams for expenses to exceed the actual amount expended. The allowance made above is the maximum which will be allowed. Should a team spend less than the amount suggested above then the actual expense is to be paid.

In view of the above conditions, the local high school will have a chance to make some money on the tournament.

Supt. J. E. Kitowski will go to Madison Saturday and meet with Prof. E. A. Clemens, Oshkosh; Prin. Thomas R. Holyoke, Monroe; Prin. Edward Hinterberger, Watertown; and Prin. V. G. Barnes of Madison to discuss terms for four district tournaments.

Speaker at Menasha Club
Banquet

Menasha—Judge Henry Graass of Green Bay, in a talk before the Menasha club at its annual banquet at Hotel Menasha Wednesday evening on Americanization called attention to factions within this country that threaten to undermine the government. The danger is not entirely without, he said.

Loyalty to the flag is needed more than ever for the preservation of the country and with the passing of the Grand Army of the Republic which did its duty during and after the civil war the country now looks to the American legion for carrying on the work, he said. One thing he regretted was that the governors of many of the states do not work together.

Judge Graass was introduced by F. J. Sensenbrenner, toastmaster. His talk was so much enjoyed that at its conclusion he was made an honorary member of the club. Speeches were given by four artists of the Benson orchestra of Chicago, the Neopolitan Trio of musicians and Mme. Lazara, a dancer.

While the banquet was in progress the wives of the members were entertained at bridge at the club rooms, where they were joined by their husbands later in the evening. The prizes were won by Mrs. Redner and Mrs. Witmore. More than 125 members and guests attended the banquet.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once. When peevish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, doesn't eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad, has stomach-ache, sore throat, diarrhea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of the little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again. You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless, "fruit laxative," they love its delicious taste, and it always makes them feel splendid. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. To be sure you get the genuine ask to see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

21 KNOWN DEAD IN CALIFORNIA STORM

Fernando valley, where several towns were inundated.

The death toll in the snowslide in the mountains above Fresno reached 13 Wednesday night when coroners' reports had been checked.

OTHER FLOODED CITIES

Besides San Diego and Los Angeles, badly flooded cities include Long Beach, where some 2,500 persons were driven from their homes by high water; Venice, where 600 or more were forced to flee; Anaheim and Fullerton, which are partially under water. An Anaheim oil tank, undermined by flood waters, toppled and added its 30,000 barrels of petroleum to the flood, covering the surface of the water with a greasy mixture.

While some rivers and creeks were reported receding and the flood crest passing, weather reports said another storm of unknown proportions was rolling in from the Pacific. The death list included one drowning at San Diego, four from traffic accidents in Los Angeles, one death at Taft and one at Riverside.

SAVE RACE TRACK

A crew of men, battling to save the Tijuana race track across the international border from San Diego appeared to have been successful in their fight against the encroaching waters of the Tijuana river.

The Los Angeles Philharmonic orchestra, composed of 100 musicians, was left marooned overnight in a train at Oceanside where the flood covered the Santa Fe tracks. Women and children refugees in Long Beach welcomed the county jail as a stopping place. Among the hairbreadth escapes was one at San Juan Capistrano, where a family of five was snatched from an automobile just before flood water caught it and carried it into the ocean.

The three dead were victims of separate snow slides which swept mining communities near Price, Utah, Wednesday. The slides occurred on both sides of Indian Summit, blocking all traffic into the Utah Basin. Five others were injured, two probably fatally in the slides.

The annual report of the secretary of the association, Fred Morris, was read and adopted. After the business meeting the commission went to the water works plant on W. Water-st where it examined the site where it is proposed to build new settling basins. This land recently was purchased from the Fox River Paper company.

FRANCE AND DISARMAMENT

As forecast by the news dispatches from Paris, France has rejected President Coolidge's proposal for a further naval limitation conference by the five leading naval powers. There is not even a qualified acceptance of the proposal in principle. The French government takes the position that the Coolidge plan is impracticable, on the ground that it conflicts with the program and the purposes of the League of Nations for a general disarmament conference. It contends that the limitation of naval armaments is closely related to land disarmament and that the two should be considered together, that it is a subject which concerns all states and that the League of Nations is the logical agency for dealing with these questions. It further holds that inasmuch as the League has initiated a general disarmament conference, with a preparatory commission created to draw up the agenda for this meeting, it is not an opportune time to discuss naval armament separately, and that its obligation to the League would be violated by entering upon such a scheme.

From the standpoint of what France regards as a special position in determining her requirements for national defense, her reply to President Coolidge is natural and plausible. Nevertheless, it is noticeable that both Great Britain and Japan, whose auxiliary naval force is quite as special and important, promptly accepted the American note. They did not express concern for League jurisdiction, nor did they advance the idea that the conference suggested by Mr. Coolidge would interfere with the general disarmament move.

It is charged, and probably with justice, that France does not wish to bind herself to naval disarmament by common agreement. There are other nations in a similar position. Italy is one of them. By throwing the question of reducing land and naval forces of all kinds into the fire, French statesmen believe that out of the confusion and special pleadings that would inevitably follow, they would save enough fat to serve their ends. It was France that blocked the attempt at the Washington Arms conference to limit construction of auxiliary craft. Mr. Hughes made a valiant effort to have the limitation broadened to cover submarines, cruisers and destroyers, but it was through France's objections that the five-three treaty was confined to capital ships. Not only this, but her rejection of the Hughes program was blunt and cold-blooded. In the matter of submarines, Hughes proposed to limit American and British strength to 90,000 tons, Japanese to 54,000 tons and French and Italian to approximately the tonnage they then had. Admiral De Bon declared that 90,000 tons was the "absolute minimum" acceptable for France, and Mr. Hughes pointed out that this would mean a large construction program by that country. Mr. Hughes then suggested the United States and Great Britain limit their submarine strength to 60,000 tons, provided France, Italy and Japan did not build beyond their then existing strength. This would have meant the scrapping of 35,000 tons by the United States, and slightly less for Great Britain. To this the French delegation repeated its demand for 90,000 tons, also announcing that it would be "impossible for France to accept a limitation below that of 330,000 tons for auxiliary craft." On this rock the conference was wrecked, except as to battleships.

Fundamentally, France's position is the same today as it was then. She talks of distant possessions to protect, in the Pacific and in the Far East. She must keep her lines of communication open. She cannot afford to build battleships, but she can afford to build cruisers and submarines. Italy has not so many colonies, although she has some in Africa and in the Mediterranean, but she has ambitions; therefore she talks in much the same vein as France. They are suspicious of each other, but they are likely to stand together in opposition to the Big Three. France has her special objects in dealing with Italy and vice versa. When it comes to land armament, all the states of continental Europe have their special problems. These give rise to fears and suspicions, which travel in a vicious circle and render the drawing up of a comprehensive agreement difficult, if not impossible.

Americans will be unable to see that France's and Italy's naval requirements are any more special than are those of the United States, Great Britain or Japan. They will be unable to see why naval disarmament cannot be undertaken independently of land disarmament. They will question the good faith of both France and Italy in rejecting Mr. Coolidge's invitation to another naval conference. They will see in it evidences of duplicity and cunning, which have done so much to retard the return of Europe to a sense of security and settled peace. Momentarily at least, France throws the whole problem of disarmament into the air. It is intimated that President Coolidge may attempt to hold a conference confined to Great Britain, Japan and the United States, but whether this would be feasible and how it would be received by Great Britain and Japan are matters involved in doubt. Still, the United States has the whip hand. It can talk disarmament with a commanding tone. It can out-build all of the powers combined, and it can do more. It can refuse to loan money to European nations to squander on armament, and they have no money of their own. Unless Europe is in fact preparing for "the next war," unless it is deliberately playing with fire, it will listen to the counsel of the United States, and it will heed its determination to lighten the burdens and perils of excessive armament.

CHINA TAKING WRONG COURSE

The Chinese war lords could have done better than to repulse Secretary Kellogg's move to ameliorate the foreign crisis in China by making the international settlement at Shanghai a safety zone. Despatches from the Orient say that both the Cantonese and the northern faction profess to believe that the United States is acting in concert with Great Britain, and that to concede Secretary Kellogg's proposal would be equivalent to acquiescing in intervention. Of course the United States has no such purpose. Its Chinese policy is its own and never has, as a matter of fact, had any connection with British policy. It was the American "Open Door" policy that saved China from dismemberment. In the present crisis we have acted entirely apart from Great Britain. Indeed, we forced Great Britain's hand on the important questions of extra-territoriality, treaty revision, concessions and tariff.

The American suggestion of an international safety zone was a purely friendly act. It was meant to secure that protection for foreigners to which they are entitled, and in a way to give the least offense to China and to avoid conflict with foreign governments. Americans would have greater respect for the leaders of the two great war parties in China, they would have greater sympathy for the national aspirations of the Chinese, had this sane proposal been promptly approved. As it is, we are left to infer that the leaders of both factions are more or less irresponsible and incompetent. They lack a due appreciation of American friendliness, and we must be on our guard in dealing with them.

Under the circumstances, there is but one course left and that is to protect our nationals whatever force is necessary. Great Britain will do the same, as will Japan. If it becomes necessary, they will join forces for the common protection of foreigners. If that happens, it will be worse for China than the ruling off of a neutral zone as a haven for foreigners. China may be in conflict with the three great world powers before she knows it, and if she is she will of course get the worst of it. There is no possibility of defeat for either Japan, Great Britain or the United States in a mission of protecting their nationals and interests in China. Therefore, the replies to the American government are exceedingly disappointing.

We offer as today's miracle the man who played a piano for two days in Chicago and lives to play again.

When Charley Birger, the Illinois gangster, was locked up he was given a machine gun with which to "protect himself." When a man is sentenced to hang in that country, they probably give him a horse.

Health Talks

A CERTAIN PARTY YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

If a doctor mixes up a conception of 11 kinds of medicine and two or three varieties of food with a good dash of bad liquor and offers it as a cure for what ails you we designate him as a charlatan or quack, or if he rascals isn't a doctor but just a crooked business man we call him a nostrum vendor, fine him $50, destroy a case or two of the stuff mixed in shipment, and file the records where no one will be likely to hear about it, lest the business suffer, or customers be shocked.

But an educator can prepare a conglomeration of studies, say a bit of physics, a flavoring of chemistry, odds and ends of botany, zoology, a trace of geology, a flavor of astronomy, a little mess of human physiology, and a lot of so-called psychology, call the finished brew "general science" and offer it as a short cut to culture, and the school men will honor him for it. For years I have assumed that most of the men who are the highest people in the world, but lately I have wondered whether school men are not giving us newspaper news a pretty hard race for this distinction. Anyway the school men seem to have found a fine substitute for the laborious task of teaching. Instead of teaching seven or eight subjects they devise this "general science" thing and teach nothing that anybody can notice. They make it all so simple and easy that nobody needs to study—everybody knows all about it without bothering to study. Education without exerting one's mind or wasting one's time, painless education. Learning simplified. The scholastic Black Bottom.

Dr. Richard Burton, noted literary authority, in a recent article in a highbrow mag on "Good Manners in Literature" quotes approvingly a remark made by the late Henry Holt, publisher: "There ought to be no difficulty, though some are alleged, in deciding what is proper for literature. Obviously the functions of the body, which even savages consent to, privacy, are not fit subjects for literature, nor is any allusion to them which is avoided in polite society. They are germane to science, but certainly not to art."

To this foppish sentiment Dr. Burton adds: "One can hear the scornful shriek of denial that assaults the welkin, after such a statement."

Statement! It is more like an old maid's scold. Literature reeks with nastiness—why, it is not safe to read aloud in the family circle from the Classics unless the course has been pre-announced and the more filthy portions deleted.

The gentleman-publisher, as Dr. Burton calls him, harbored rather fictitious ideas of the conduct of savages. The truth is that savages do not consign the functions of the body to privacy—not until they are taught by civilized people to do so, and civilized people get that way from associating the functions of the body with the viciousness, licentiousness and diseases that prevail among them. It may be true that for the purposes of art, fiction and propitious flights of the imagination, the functions of the body are not so good. At the same time I beg leave to mingle my raucous voice in the assault on the welkin, if I may contribute a snarl, as follows and to wit: If some of these exalted literary folk had a little less regard for the feats of freak imagination and a little more for the solid truth of science, maybe the real world we live in would be a better one.

Poor old Alex. Pope, the only poet that ever got my goat, doesn't rank very high in the opinion of the literary critics yet his doggerel seems great to me. "Vordwadesen," Shakespeare, Shelley, none of them, not the whole parcel put together, ever produced the equal of Pope's.

Know then thyself, presume not God to scan;
The proper study of mankind is man.

Even if the literati doubt the propriety of acquaintance with a certain party can't they stand aloof with their noses in the air and do their snob stuff without attempting to tell us lowbrows what is and what is not polite manners?

LOOKING BACKWARD

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

Thursday, Feb. 19, 1902

A new organization known as the Northwestern Paper and Pulp Manufacturers' association was perfected in this city the previous day at an adjourned meeting of the paper manufacturers of the state who had not yet granted the concessions asked by the United Brotherhood of Paper Makers. George A. Whiting of Keenah presided at the meeting. The nature and work of the organization was explained to the public through the medium of a lecture that the association was to be mutually protective and had been organized in order that the manufacturers would be able to take some united stand on questions affecting their interests in the future.

A daughter was born the previous day to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kruse.

A number of Appleton women were attending a party given by Mrs. Will Dutcher at Oshkosh that day. Among them were Mrs. N. C. Gintz, Mrs. C. A. Green, Mrs. Julius Wehrer, Mrs. D. E. Beck, Mrs. C. Johnson, Mrs. E. H. Healy and Miss Abbie Goodland.

Marriage licenses were issued to Robert E. Hagen and Maggie Arns, both of Hortonville.

The board of editors of the Lawrentian, a magazine devoted to the interests of the university and conducted by the students, were planning to make the February number which was to appear that week, a special memorial number in memory of Dr. G. M. Steele. A picture of the former Lawrence president was to form the frontpiece and the magazine was to contain special articles from Dr. J. Scott Davis, Olin A. Curtis and other prominent alumni.

TEN YEARS AGO

Thursday, Feb. 15, 1917

At a meeting of the Appleton branch of the National Letter Carriers' association held the previous evening officers elected were: William Bailey, president; Edward Witt, vice president; Louis Stark, secretary; George Kocher, treasurer.

Dr. H. E. Ellsworth was elected president of the Quinton Oil and Gas Co. at a meeting of the directors the previous afternoon. Other officers elected were: Martin Weyenber, vice president; W. W. Notlage, secretary and A. G. Kuhn, treasurer. The company had a short time previous declared a dividend of 10 per cent on its capital stock of $50,000.

The marriage of Miss Alida Kaaten and Elmer Koss took place that afternoon at the home of the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Koss, Second-ave.

The Misses Ruth and Rose Ryan, Cherry-st., entertained members of the high school faculty at their home the previous evening. A supper was served at 6:30 after which dice was played. Prizes were won by A. J. Smith and Miss Ada Hahn.

Mrs. Henry Hegner, 777 Harris-st., entertained her four sisters and their husbands at a dinner party. The guests were Mrs. A. J. Smith, Mrs. D. J. Graham and Mrs. Mary Pasch of Seymour; Mr. and Mrs. Gish and Mr. and Mrs. Fisher of Appleton.

Mr. and Mrs. D. P. Steinberg left the previous day for Madison where Mr. Steinberg was to attend the annual meeting of the Wisconsin Association of Real Estate Agents.

HASKIN WRITES TODAY

ART AND AGRICULTURE

Washington, D. C. — There are ten government departments in Washington and if the average layman, acquainted only in a general way with governmental activities, were given nine guesses as to which of the departments maintained a staff of artists he would probably miss out on all his chances. Surely he would name the Department of Agriculture as his last guess, if he were given a tenth, and yet that would be the correct answer.

The Treasury Department, of course, has artists who make the plates from which treasury notes and bank notes are printed, but it remains for the Department that has to do with the farming interests of the country to maintain a staff of 50 to 75 brush and pen artists, as well as others whose forte is modeling.

Moreover, one of these artists has duplicated the talent of the artist of tradition who painted a bunch of grapes so realistically that a fox ate them, or attempted to eat them. This Department of Agriculture artist painted an apple in half sections that was so true to life that over night a mouse ate the seeds out of the painting. Take it or leave it, that is the story, and there are people in the Department, other than the artist in question, who stick to it.

R. C. Steadman is the artist. He is modest and unassuming, and he merely smiles when the story is put up to him and he is asked to vouch for it. But when he shows samples of his work even the most skeptical must be convinced. His work is by colors of all kinds of fruits that look good enough to eat and that certainly might fool the wisest of mice.

Mr. Steadman has been doing this work for the Department of Agriculture for some twelve years. Prior to that he designed jewelry for a matter of fifteen years. His work is by no means confined to reproductions of fruits, but he does water-colors of vegetables, flowers, and what not that grow out of the ground. His paintings are used to illustrate government publications for lantern slides, and for lithographs.

ESSENTIALLY UTILITARIAN

Authorities say it is customary and convenient as well as reasonable to distinguish between those arts which minister primarily to the physical or material needs of man, and those whose primary purpose is to minister to man's emotions, apart from practical or material service. The arts of the first sort are called the useful arts; those of the second sort, the fine arts. The products of useful arts are designed for purposes external to themselves, to serve the needs of daily life; in other words, they are created to be used. The products of the fine arts, on the other hand, are created for their own sake; they are an end in themselves, or, to be more accurate, they are created for the sake of the emotions they are designed to express and arouse.

The same experts point out that a chair, however marvelously carved, is essentially a work of useful art because the chair was made primarily to be used as a seat, whereas a picture is painted for its own sake, not to be used but to be looked at and to excite pleasurable emotions by its beauty of subject, drawing and color.

The work of Mr. Steadman and his associate artists is essentially utilitarian — it is done primarily for useful purposes but it is beautiful, to the layman, and who shall say that it does not bridge the gap between the useful and the fine arts? Consider the mouse! If that lowly and despised but acute animal can be fooled it must be good art even if it may not be classed with the fine arts.

And, of course, when Mr. Steadman spent eight weeks in a New England forest painting pictures of the bluster rust on trees, that piece of work could not be classified under the head of fine arts. He painted pictures of individual trees and of the forest showing the progressive stages of the bluster rust. Lantern slides and lithographs were made of his work and distributed among agricultural agents throughout the country to be used in instructing farmers and foresters as to the dangers of the rust and how to combat it.

So, too, when the artist of the Department paint pictures of fruit and vegetables, that have been in cold storage and depict the safe price of different temperatures upon those important edibles they are not indulging in art for art's sake, but are doing work that may prove of great economic value to the country.

MODELING THAT IS PRACTICAL

Similar in its practicality to the art of Mr. Steadman and his colleagues who do their stuff in water-colors on Bristol board is that of Miss A. A. Newton who does modeling in wax. Miss Newton is not on record as having fooled any mice with her reproductions of various food products, but she can put one of her wax apples or oranges alongside the real article and defy an ordinary newspaper person to tell which is which without lifting them. The wax models are lighter than the originals.

Also it is to her credit that she made a model of a cheese with holes and everything — everything, that is, except the aroma — that was so realistic that a man who saw it in an exhibit became convinced that his life work should be "making" cheeses. Whereupon he started a cheese factory.

Miss Newton can reproduce in wax everything that might be served at a course dinner, and do it so well that the most jaded appetite might be tempted, while an epicure would be inquiring as to the name, address, and salary requirements of the cook. In fact, she has done a great deal of just that sort of thing. One of her stunts was to model every article of food that should go into the diet of twelve-year old children including breakfast, dinner, and supper. Another was the reproduction of a meal for diabetics. The food from which she makes her models is prepared with the utmost care by an expert from a hospital.

This kind of work is done for the Bureau of Home Economics and the models are sent to all sections of the country for various exhibitions, county fairs, and the like. It is said for Miss Newton — she makes no claims for herself — that she can make a wax replica of a slice of bread with two or three slices cut from it, and of a nicely done ham with a slice or two cut from it, that would start anyone who hasn't a ham complex to making sandwiches, while a box of her strawberries would be sufficient inspiration for a church festival.

There is an exhibit of these wax replicas of fruits, vegetables and foods of all kinds in the Department of Agriculture that is said to include every food product that comes from the farms of the United States.

One interesting phase of the work of these artists in the Department of Agriculture is that after they have painted pictures or made wax reproductions of various foods they are

See-Sawing On Broadway

By Gilbert Swan

New York—The siren song of opportunity, which brings youth scurrying from farms and desks to this one and only Gotham, keeps echoing in their ears long after disillusion has set in.

They drift here and there, following one lead and then another and taking wrong would sneer at back home—just to be closer to the song's source. One comes across them in the most unexpected places and with a certain sense of shock and surprise.

The other day I hailed the first taxi that came by and, as it sped through Central Park, from the driver's seat I heard a lusty young voice singing a cross-section of the Puccini operas. As I paid my fare I inquired "how come?"

My driver, it seems, had been none other than one Kenneth Le Roy, who was studying for grand opera, and driving a taxi by way of making a living in the meanwhile.

And this is to let the boys back in the Utah Agricultural College know that, even though Kenneth graduated from there, they're never going to keep him down on the farm! It's too late now. He's seen Broadway and scented the Metropolitan from the gallery and he's going to make the grade or know why.

I heard a little of his story. He had a good baritone voice and after he left the Utah college a wealthy contractor heard him sing and staked him to a course of voice instruction in New York. "Good old Utah!" sighed my driver. "But gimme New York!"

So many chorines were coached to tell fanciful stories of lodylike girlhoods in small towns that the wisecrackers now have a line which goes: "All choruses girls were once either choir singers or nuns."

Not long ago a young reporter of a New York daily, gathering paragraphs for a daily stage column, was handed a paragraph by a publicity man which recited that a certain Sally Blank was a minister's daughter from a certain tank town and sang in the choir.

He duly recorded it and when it reached the copy-reader's and city editor's desk a loud laugh went up. "Tell for the oldest gag on the street," the young reporter was admonished. Angered, and curious, the scribe looked up the town on the map and sent a telegram to the Rev. Blank, Congregationalist minister, which read: "Are you father Sally Blank, Broadway showgirl?"

"Promptly came the answer: 'If I'm not I'd like evidence to contrary.'"

After flashing the message in the faces of his superiors, the reporter presented it to the publicity man.

The last chapter of this story, as I got it, was stated in the publicity office that night. Peggy Blank had been called on the carpet.

"Say, why did you hold out on us? Why didn't you ever tell us you were a minister's daughter, and once sang in the choir?" demanded the P. A. "And have you weissenheimer's given me the laugh? You'd have told me to invent a new one."

The Question Box

Q. What is the name for wealthy Mexicans' country homes? A. I. M.

A. The accepted designation of a wealthy city dweller's country seat is "huerta" — thus the "Huerta Galileon" is the residence of Senor Galileon, etc. The terms "jardón" and "finca," as well as "Estancia," are also used. The word "hacienda," includes a wealthy man's residence and also his farming or ranching property but, "huerta" is as stated.

Q. What a retho reasons for the belief of the theory of molecules? C. B. F.

A. One of the many reasons for the belief in the molecular theory is that there are no known facts that are in opposition to this assumption. The results of the kinetic theory of gases have placed the molecular conception of matter in an indisputable position but, even without this theory, there is a great accumulation of electrical and optical evidence in its favor.

permitted to eat the models. And the models are always the most perfect specimens that can be procured.

QUEER QUIRKS OF NATURE

A BIRD THAT LAYS EASTER EGGS

BY ARTHUR N. PACK

President, American Nature Ass'n.
Very scabious is this bird, a good mixer, always liking to be in a crowd. It was because of the sound "murre, murre," which is their vocal utterance, that these birds were named.

The Murre belongs to the family Alcidae to which also belong the Puffins and the Dovesicks and other species found in the northern hemisphere, mostly on the Pacific coast. Most of their lives are spent at sea and they are good swimmers and divers.

They use both their wings and their feet in pursuing fish in the water, but they are very slow and awkward on land. As their feet are at the end of their bodies, it makes it rather difficult for them to walk.

They nest in colonies, vast numbers of them frequenting cliffs along the coast of the north Atlantic from New York to the Arctic regions. Occasionally they are found in the region of the Great Lakes, evidently having strayed out of their course.

The Murre lays but one egg. This she deposits on the bare rock. The egg is about the size of a hen's egg, and shaped something like a pear. Nature has cunningly shaped the Murre's egg to prevent it from rolling very far, and but for this wise provision most of the eggs would fall from the crags and ledges into the sea.

Hundreds of birds may be found

AMurre mothering her own baby—and several of her neighbors', too. Incubating together, but every bird seems to know her own egg. Another queer quirk of nature is to be found in the appearance of these Murre eggs which resemble gaily colored Easter eggs. This probably serves as a means of identification to the mother.

ENLARGEMENT OF SANATORIUM PUT OFF TO NEXT FALL

County Board Decides to Go
Slow in Matter of Spending Money

Pointing out the need of more room at Riverview sanatorium, the special sanatorium committee appointed by the county board last fall Wednesday morning presented a resolution to the county board approving plans of the sanatorium trustees for doubling the capacity of the institution, and asking for an appropriation of $75,000 to carry out the project. The board laid the resolution over until its November session.

Plans under consideration by the trustees provide for increasing the capacity by 32 beds, and adding other departments which would facilitate treatment of patients. The institution now has 32 beds. As an example of the lack of room at the sanatorium, the committee pointed out that there now are eight patients from this county in other county institutions, and that there are a number of persons waiting for admission here.

Opposition to authorizing any more expenditures at this time was expressed by Supervisor Malachi Ryan. Combined Locks. In view of the Richard tax suit now pending against the county, he urged the board to "keep within its bounds" until it knew where it stood financially.

Supervisors P. H. Ryan and John Tracy, Appleton, both opposed approval of the resolution at this time. Supervisor Ryan suggested that it be laid over until the April session, by which time the tax suit might be settled.

Supervisor Tracy also urged the board to lay it over, holding that the new county board which will take office after the spring election should take action on it.

The motion to lay the resolution over until next fall was introduced by Supervisor Anton Jansen, Little Chute.

The original draft of the Declaration of Independence is kept in a vault in the State Department in Washington.

Mayor Suspects There Might Be A Catch In Latest Gift

Mayor A. C. "e is congratulating himself on his popularity with the women of Appleton and at the same time he is wondering if a gift he received Wednesday morning from a group of "Appleton women" has some hidden meanings.

Early Wednesday morning, according to the mayor, a prominent Appleton woman entered the mayor's office at the city hall. In explanatory address she said she had been chosen to present him with a gift from a group of Appleton ladies who did not wish to have their names mentioned in the matter. She also asked the mayor not to "misunderstand the meaning of the presentation."

The gift was a small framed picture containing a part of a talk by President Calvin Coolidge. Here is what she wrote:

"Nothing is easier than spending the public money. It is not to belong to anybody. The temptation is overwhelming to bestow it on 'nobody.'"

"It's a fine sign," the mayor said, "and I intend to keep it in my office as long as I am here."

CONGRESS WANTS BOXING COMMISSION FOR FIGHTS

Washington, D. C., (AP)—The era of flying congressional fists found humorous outlet Wednesday in a movement to apply the orderly processes of the prize ring to future bouts among senators and representatives, but when the proposal was presented on the house floor, matters threatened to take a serious turn.

In the midst of a joking discussion of the need for a capital boxing commission, Representative Blanton of Texas, who Tuesday wrestled with a colleague in a committee meeting, challenged two or three of those who were tantalizing him. The challenge was laughed off, and later an effort to erase it from the record failed.

GILMAN IS ELECTED MASON HIGH PRIEST

Kellogg, Merrill, royal arch captain; and Archie Harte, Evansville, master first veil.

BUILDING PERMITS

Two building permits, authorizing improvements estimated at $2,000, were issued by the building inspector, Wednesday. The first was for a garage and was granted to J. W. Martin, 1323 W. Pine-st. The second was for concrete foundations under two houses and was issued to Myra I. Klappstein. The two houses are at 1125 and 1129 E. Nawada-st.

PROPOSED FREIGHT RATES MAY REDUCE CABBAGE MARKETS

Chamber of Commerce Wants
Help of Farmers to Fight
Proposed Increases

Farmers of Outagamie-co probably will be compelled to cut three of the four markets to which they now ship cabbage from their list, proposed railroad rates go into effect, according to R. G. Wort, traffic manager of the chamber of commerce. Present rates to Chicago are 19 cents and the proposed rates are 22 cents; to Kansas City the present rates are 33 1/2 cents and the proposed rates are 40 cents; to Omaha the rates are 33 1/2 cents and the proposed rates 40 cents; to Lincoln, Neb., the rates are 33 cents and the proposed rates 35 cents. This means that if the proposed tariffs are permitted farmers will be able to ship cabbage only to Chicago, because of the high freight rates to the other three cities, Mr. Wort said.

Mr. Wort is working on material to fight the proposed rate increases of the carriers and has requested county farmers to report their cabbage tonnage each year and their reactions to the proposed rate changes. So far only a few of the farmers have responded and he is anxious to get as many figures as possible.

Mr. Wort was to go to Chicago Thursday to attend a meeting of representatives of carriers and traffic managers, starting Friday and continuing until Monday. The carriers are expected to present an exhibit showing the high cost of operation to justify their proposed increases. The traffic managers will offset this with reports of a study of costs of every shipment of less than carload freight in their districts. These studies it is said, show the carriers already are making a large profit.

Personality in Advertising will be discussed by H. L. Post at the fifth class of the course in advertising for beginners at the Appleton Vocational school at 7:30 Friday evening. The course is sponsored by the Appleton Advertising club and members of the club conduct the weekly classes. Mr. Post also will discuss nationally advertised goods, trade conditions and consumers' attitude.

Because of its germ destroying properties, nothing has ever been found to take the place of this sulphur preparation that instantly brings ease from the itching, burning and irritation. Mentho-Sulphur heals eczema, ringworm, leaving the skin clear and smooth. It seldom fails to relieve the torment or disfigurement. CITY HALL ELECTRIC SYSTEM IS INADEQUATE

The electric lighting wiring system of the city hall is faulty and inadequate, it was announced Tuesday by Louis Luebke, fire department electrician, following an investigation. Mr. Luebke reported to Mayor Rule that the single feed line carrying power into the building was not large enough, and this was causing the fuses of the lighting system to be burned out frequently. Repairs to the system would cost in the neighborhood of $275, Mr. Luebke reported.

The Semi-Dress--Worn On The Street Or To Bridge Parties, Is Latest Addition To Milady's Wardrobe

NY HENRI BENDEL
NEW YORK — The fashionable woman finds many uses for the semi-dress, sometimes not quite so severe as she would wear for shopping or for street, something for matinee, bridge parties, informal teas and relatively unimportant affairs.

For such occasions a new type of frock has been developed that has the ease and casual line of the sport dress, but is constructed in figure or embroidered fabrics, made more feminine by the large hat, or more conservative by the small model that carries out the main color.

QUICK CHANGES
Women today must be able to make changes in clothes quickly, because the fashionable day may bring many distinct social diversions that call for particular costumes. There is little patience with the involved frock that has elaborate closings and requires a maid's attendance.

The jumper and the skirt on the slip foundation have spoiled women for more formal attire. Since women have learned that comfort and style may be reconciled, they demand comfort in every particular.

No fashionable woman will tolerate a hat that is not perfectly fitted and hence perfectly comfortable, or will she wear small shoes for appearance's sake. She will not suffer any longer for style, because her intelligence tells her this is not necessary or desirable.

DEB'S APPROVAL
Illustrated today are three of the semi-dress frocks that the debutantes today sponsor. They have youth, pep and dash, and will stand the somewhat vicious wear that the modern girl gives her clothes.

Very spring-like is the two-piece costume of white silk crepe, with the blouse embroidered in Chinese medallions outlined with two rows of white china beads, and a skirt of white silk crepe with inverted pleats. The embroidery combines shades of yellow, rose, pale blue and apple green, and hence the hat of yellow Italian straw with tucked crown and slightly rippling brim carries out the color scheme, emphasizing the color that is particularly smart now.

Printed silks are the for an enormous vogue in spite of their popularity last season and the season before. This year, designs are more artistic than ever before and color treatments more subtle.

The printed frock pictured flaunts yellow, red, green and lavender flowers and then is relieved from any turnings except the lavender crepe de chine which edges the blouse and forms a tie at the neck and the soft wide girle carelessly knotted in front. The large hat of lavender straw is wide enough of brim to terrify any but the most slender damsel.

Printed and plain crepes are combined in the model with the skirt of bright red silk crepe with tiered sides and back, with blouse of white pongee embroidered in red, yellow and green. The red crepe used for the skirt forms the tiny vest and the bands that accent the collar and sleeves.

For daytime, the crepe de chine and chiffon frock will lead the modes though there are many alternatives in the newer heavy crepes, crepella, georgette crepe, lace, and the wash silks that are very desirable for sport wear.

Printed colors and all black will distribute the honors between themselves. Girdles and belts are featured and sleeves are almost invariably long, though one French designer is trying out the three-quarter length.

Asherton, Texas—(P)—Mrs. R. S. Conly's bid to fame lays in conquering a 133 acre farm on the outskirts of Asherton.

Last year she raised 100 acres of spinach and acres of tomatoes, besides a good crop of grapes and seedless oranges and grape fruit. Although the winter garden district has an average of 25 to 30 inches of rainfall annually, ample for ordinary needs, Mrs. Conly has irrigated her farm. She values her homestead at $300 an acre.

Love Letters Of The Great

AS COMPILED BY DIANA RICE

ROBERT BURNS—1739-1796

It was after he had indited "marriage lines" to Jean Armour (with whom he later entered into wedlock) that the irrepressible Bobby Burns wrote the burning and poetical missives to the lady he called Clarinda. He signed them "Sylvander." Left to a life of poverty by a cruel husband, Mrs. McLehose seems to have inspired the sympathetic Burns, who met her in Edinburgh, with an emotion not wholly platonic. But though the poet inscribed many ardent phrases to Mrs. McLehose, as he had done before to other charmers, he eventually married Jean Armour—declaring the while that after all it was his first love Ellison Begbie who would have made him the best wife.

Robert Burns to Ellison Begbie, Lochlie, 1780.

My dear E.—I do not remember, in the course of your acquaintance and mine, ever to have heard your opinion on the ordinary way of falling in love, amongst people of our station of life—I do not mean the persons who proceed in the way of bargain, but those whose affection is really placed on the person.

Though I be, as you know very well, but a very awkward lover myself, yet, as I have some opportunities of observing the conduct of others who are much better skilled in the affair of courtship than I am, I often think it is owing to lucky chance more than to good management that there are not more unhappy marriages than usually are.

It is natural for a young fellow to like the acquaintance of the females, and customary for him to keep their company when occasion serves. Some one of them is more agreeable to him than the rest; there is something—he knows not what—pleases him—he knows not how—in her company. This I take to be what is called love with the greater part of us; and I must own, my dear E., it is a hard game, such a one as you have to play when you meet with such a lover. You cannot admit but he is sincere; and yet, though you use him ever so favorably, perhaps in a few months, or at farthest, a year or two, the steady unaccountable fancy may make him as distractingly fond of another, whilst you are quite forgot. I am aware that perhaps the next time I have the pleasure of seeing you you may bid me take my own lesson home, and tell me that the passion I have professed for you is perhaps one of those transient flashes I have been describing; but I hope, my dear E., you will do me the justice to believe me when I assure you that the love I have for you is founded on the sacred principles of virtue and honor; and, by consequence, so long as you continue possessed of those amiable qualities which first inspired my passion for you, so long must I continue to love you. Believe me, my dear, it is love like this alone which can render the married life is only friendship in talk of flames and raptures as long as they please, and a warm fancy, with a flow of youthful spirits, may make them feel something like what they describe, but sure am I, with the nobler faculties of the mind, the kindred feeling of the heart, can only be the foundation of friendship; and it has always been my opinion that the married life is only friendship in a more exalted degree.

If you will be so good as to grant my wishes, and it should please Providence to spare us to the latest periods of life, I can look forward and see that even then, though bent down with wrinkled age—even, when all other worldly circumstances will be indifferent to me, I will regard my E., with the tenderest affection—and for this plain reason, because she is still possessed of those noble qualities, improved to a much higher degree, which first inspired my affection for her.

"O happy state, when souls each other draw
Where love is liberty, and nature law."

I know, were I to speak in such a style to many a girl who thinks herself possessed of no small share of sense, she would think it ridiculous; but the language of the heart is, my dear E., the only courtship I shall ever use to you.

When I look over what I have written I am sensible it is vastly different from the ordinary style of courtship but I make no apology. I know your good nature will excuse what your good sense may see amiss.

SAINT AND SINNER

By Anne Austin

"I'm sure you understand, Miss Faith," Stephen Churchill spoke in a low, gentle voice to "the girl who was watching, with staring, tragic eyes her little sister being led away by deputy sheriffs, that ball is not permitted in this state where the indictment charges first degree murder. She's innocent," Faith told her despairingly, but, knowing that alien curious eyes were upon her, she managed to smile brilliantly. "Thank you, Mr. Churchill. May see you—privately? I—I want to talk things over with you."

"Thank you," Faith did not look at him until the door had closed upon Cherry. Then she turned her beautiful, dark eyes imploringly upon him. "You do believe in her, don't you, Mr. Churchill?" Her voice was so low that not even Bob just behind her could hear the words.

Churchill nodded his great, grizzled head emphatically, too emphatically, Faith thought miserably. His voice boomed out so that reports could hear him distinctly. "As innocent as she is beautiful, Miss Faith. I wish all of my cases were as easy as this one."

"He doesn't really believe she's innocent," Faith told her despairingly, but, knowing that alien curious eyes were upon her, she managed to smile brilliantly. "Thank you, Mr. Churchill. May see you—privately? I—I want to talk things over with you."

with—with my fiancée, Mr. Hathaway. It was the first time she had referred to Bob in just that way, and she was rewarded by a quick pressure of Bob's fingers upon her arm.

"The quicker the better," Churchill answered cheerfully. "I'm going to my office now. Shall I drive you there?"

"I have my car, thanks," Bob interposed quickly. "Miss Lane and I will follow you immediately, if it convenient for you now."

After they had elbowed their way through the still dense throng on the courthouse steps and lawn, Bob hurried Jim Lane and 42 into the car, the back seat. "I'll drive you home," he told them, "and then Faith and I are going for a conference with Churchill."

Jim Lane sat in a huddled heap of dazed misery as the car threaded its way through the crowded streets. Looking over her shoulder at them occasionally, with a tremulous, reassuring smile, Faith saw that Junior kept his arm about his father's shoulders, and that one of his strong young hands was tightly clamped over the trembling old man's gnarled fist. The sight of these two—father and son—brought together in despair and sorrow, tightened Faith's throat with tears, but there was a little throb of gladness in her heart. The twenty-year-old "sheik," rather notorious for his wildness, had suddenly become a man on whom his father could lean.

THE TINYMITES

By Hal Cochran

READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE

THE small balloons the Tines held rose quickly. That's why Coppy yelled, "For goodness sake hang on real tight. The ground is 'way below. We can't be hurt up in the air. There's nothing here to bring a scare, so let's just keep on floating till we find out where we'll go."

How queer it seemed to float on high, among the clouds up in the sky. A bit of breeze was blowing and the Tines picked up speed. They all went swinging to and fro. First very fast then very slow, till finally Coppy's red balloon was blown up in the lead.

And then they started dropping down. Said Scouty, "We are o'er a town. I plainly see some buildings and a steeple and a farm. I wish the wind would get real strong, so we'd rise up where we belong. I fear if we drop lower, we will surely come to harm."

The trip, by now, was getting tough for they had dropped down—low enough to have to dodge the trees and things that rose up near their feet. "My goodness me," said Coppy loud, "Supposing we'd fall in the crowd." The others looked and saw a throng of people in the street. "Oh, well," said Coppy in disgust. "I wish my old balloon would bust. I'm tired of dodging everything. It makes my bones all ache. Instead of bobbing all around, I'd rather be down on the ground. I'm brave enough to jump, except a lot of bones might break."

And then he got a quick surprise. A steeple rose up toward the skies and Coppy chanced to blow that way while skimming o'er a house. Just as he reached the steeple top he felt his journey quickly stop, and then he found the steeple point had caught him by the blouse.

TREASURES FROM OLD HOMESTEAD

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

SALE! We stopped beside the road, lured by the magic that draws anyone in search of the "old."

I felt guilty the minute I stepped inside the house, where a kind old lady had lived beside the road for over eighty years, and then a friend to man.

It was small and had been tidy, before desecrated by the tramping feet of strangers and the auctioneer's raucous voice. It had been more than tidy. It had been lovely!

The hall was wainscoted in paneled burled walnut, the little stair with its plain rail was simple and sweet.

In the parlor was the walnut organ kept for nearly seventy years (about a scratch, and the horsehair set with which the little bird had gone to housekeeping. On the wall in an old frame was a steel engraving of the ten commandments, illustrated and a sampler as perfect as the day it was made. "The Lord Will Provide," it said in tiny patient stitches.

AN OLD SPOOL BEY
On the porch were some things that had been sold, an old spinning wheel and an old "spool" bed. To me the greatest of all wonders was a trundle bed. Do you know what a trundle bed is? It is a little flat bed for the baby that can be pushed under the big bed in the daytime. Even the babies raised in that would be old now.

Upstairs, clocks, chests and lamps were waiting to be taken away. They had been sold, and the auctioneer was now selling the carpets on the floors.

ANOTHER TREASURE
In a tiny black frame hanging crooked and abandoned in an empty bedroom was a small engraved certificate that began, "I hereby certify that on the eight day of June in the year 1859, I joined in wedlock—"

I have the little walnut, horse-hair covered parlor set. The tiny sofa holds over eighty years, and then a friend to man.

I have not been able to sit in the little sofa yet.

How To Play Bridge

The pointer for today is: A sound initial bid may be depend upon to show us quick tricks.

All first bids, whether made by Dealer, Second Hand, Third Hand or Fourth Hand, are original bids; but original bids made by Dealer or Second Hand (i. e. by a player whose partner has not previously passed) are also called initial bids to distinguish them from original bids made by a Third or Fourth Hand whose partner has passed. It is obvious that greater strength may be expected from a partner who has not been heard from, than from one, who, by passing, has announced that he has not the strength required for an initial bid. Therefore original bids by Third and Fourth Hand require greater strength than initial bids by Dealer or Second Hand.

There is a clear distinction between original No Trump bids and original suit bids; but they have one feature in common, viz: that to make the bid the hand is expected to contain two quick tricks.

A quick trick is a King-Queen (i. e. a King and a Queen of the same suit) or an Ace. An Ace-King (i. e. an Ace and a King of the same suit) is two quick tricks. An Ace of one suit and a King-Queen of another would be two quick tricks; but an Ace in one suit, a King in a second and a Queen in a third would not be two quick tricks because there would be no certainty that either the King or the Queen, unsupported by other high cards, would take a trick. There is an even chance that the King would do so; and much less than an even chance that the Queen would; but the two chances combined cannot be considered the equivalent of a quick trick.

The bidding of five-card suits will be discussed and to prepare for it look over the following hands and make up your mind which, if any of them, you would bid initially:

1. Sp. x-x-x. Ht. x-x. D. x-x. C. Ace-King-x-x.
2. Sp. x-x-x. Ht. x-x. D. Ace-Queen-10-x-x. C. x-x-x.
3. Sp. x-x-x. Ht. Ace-Queen-Jack-x-x. D. x-x. C. x-x-x.

The pointer is: A suit-bid of one should be made on five cards headed by Ace-King, even with the other eight cards utterly worthless; but five cards headed by Ace-Queen with nothing on the side should be passed.

Today the subject of our consideration will be initial suit-bids made with five-card suits, unaided by any side strength. For the purposes of illustration, it may be considered that the small cards (x) in the examples given below are Fours, Threes and Twos.

Three hands were given to illustrate the slight margin which may exist between hands which should be passed and those which should be bid.

1. Sp. x-x-x. Ht. x-x. D. x-x-x. C. Ace-King-x-x.
2. Sp. x-x-x. Ht. x-x. D. Ace-Queen-10-x-x. C. x-x-x.
3. Sp. x-x-x. Ht. Ace-Queen-Jack-x-x. D. x-x. C. x-x-x.

In No. 1 there are two quick tricks at the head of a five-card suit, and that suit accordingly should be named. To fail to bid with this type of suit is a common error which is apt to be fatal. The point is so important that a special explanation of the reasons for the bid will be made in another article.

2. Sp. x-x-x. Ht. x-x. D. Ace-Queen-10-x-x. C. x-x-x.

This hand is just a shade under the strength required for an initial bid. It has not two quick tricks and, although the Queen and the Ten of the suit will probably produce a trick between them, they may not do so (if produced, it may be belated) and therefore with this holding—strong as it is—the hand should be initially passed.

3. Sp. x-x-x. Ht. Ace-Queen-Jack-x-x. D. x-x. C. x-x-x.

This hand should be bid as it is a shade stronger than Ace-King-x-x-x; with the adverse King of the suit on the right of the hand (an even chance) it will take three high-card tricks and probably will keep the adversaries from making a trick in the suit. With the adverse King on the wrong side, it will still take two high-card tricks and, while these tricks may not be as "quick" as would be the case with Ace-King, nevertheless the winning qualities of the high card in the hand will average higher than the winning qualities of Ace-King. Therefore a bid of one should be made with this combination.

The following hand will next be discussed:

1. Sp. Ace-King-4-3-2. Ht. 3-2. D. 4-3-2. C. 4-3-2.

2. Sp. 4-3-2. Ht. 4-3-2. D. 3-2. C. Ace-King-4-3-2.

CLINTONVILLE IS NEXT BASKETBALL FOE FOR SMITHMEN

Basketballers Hope to Avenge Defeat by Northerners Early in Season

Kaukauna-Kaukauna high school's next basketball opponent will be Clintonville. The northern city comes to Kaukauna with an early season 25 to 3 win over the Keweenaw and is confident of repeating in the Orange and Black floor. Kaukauna has shown great improvement since that game at Clintonville. Coach William Smith has had his team out every night practicing hard for the tilt and Wednesday he took the squad for a workout in the Lawrence gym in Appleton. It seems the Kaukauna team has found itself and will show the fans many good games before the season closes. Most sensational of developments in the Orange and Black squad is the speed acquired by "Conney" Miller. Down the floor like a shot and cut away with five baskets and a free throw for 11 of Kaukauna's 21 points. Captain Macarone and McFadden also are showing improvement. Farwell is out with an injured leg but Smith hopes to have him back within a few days. Friday evening's game will be called at 8:30 at the high school auditorium. A good preliminary game will be played an hour earlier.

On Monday evening Kaukauna will journey to Green Bay to engage the West Green Bay team. West is maintaining to stay near the top in Fox River Valley conference. Comparative scores indicate West Green Bay and Kaukauna are quite evenly matched. Appleton defeated Kaukauna 29 to 17 and the College City aggregation won by practically the same score from West Green Bay. Kaukauna-West game will be played on the new gym floor. Y. M. C. A. The floor is considerably larger than the one in the West High school.

William Waterpool, who will referee the game, was coach at Kaukauna High school four years ago when Kaukauna took its basketball squad to its first district tournament. Mr. Waterpool is now at Marinette high school.

SUPERVISORS HEAR PLAN TO ESTABLISH MUSIC IN SCHOOLS

Dr. Earl L. Baker Outlines
Proposed Program to County Board

The county board Wednesday morning listened to a plan by Dr. Earl L. Baker, superintendent of music in Appleton schools, to establish music in all county schools.

Dr. Baker outlined a program which would give every pupil in the county, whether in a rural or city school, the benefit of instruction in music.

No action was taken by the board. His plan provides for organization of circuits of four or five school districts, the music teacher to spend one day of the week at each school. One-room schools or state graded schools cannot afford a full-time teacher, but the expense could be pro-rated by combining districts into circuits, he said.

By this training, rural pupils would be developed musically so that they could sing patriotic, folk and art songs, and learn to read music from printed pages.

The instruction would be furnished free. A festival concert, tending to the cultural development of the entire community, could be held at least once a year, children from all over the county meeting to sing as a huge chorus.

The program would cost each circuit, composed of each school district in a community up to five, approximately $400, according to Dr. Baker, or $80 a year for each one-room school district. His estimate is based on the following figures: Teacher's salary, $275; transportation, $40; extra song book material, $10; machine records, $5; incidentals, such as pitch pipe, teacher's manuals, reference books, harmony paper, etc., $25.

"Music is the most cultural of all subjects," Dr. Baker said. "Can you imagine a youngster thinking of anything evil while he is singing or listening to music? Evil thoughts are farthest from his mind at such a time."

Choirs and choruses in each community will be fed by material trained in their own schools, he pointed out. The system will help solve the leisure time problem, and will make music a

CARETAKER DRAWS PLAN FOR PARK IMPROVEMENT

Plans for the improvement of Allie park tourist campsite are being drawn by the caretaker according to Wenzel Hassman, chairman of the public building and grounds committee of the common council, which is in charge of improvements to be made in spring. A meeting of the committee is to be called as soon as the plans are completed. A sum of $10,000 recently was appropriated by the common council for improvements.

New tables and benches and other improvements are included. A rest room and recreational building will be constructed. Bids for this building will be called for within the next month.

vocation as well as an avocation. It is a socializing factor and it gives rural children equal advantages in musical education with children in cities. Should a child move to a city school where vocal music is compulsory, he could go on with his class without embarrassment.

Approximate costs for larger schools would be as follows: Two-room schools $115; three-room schools, $152; four-room schools, $172; five-room schools, $215; six-room schools, $265; seven-room schools, $300; eight-room schools, $320.

The cost of the project could be met by local taxation, according to Dr. Baker.

Teachers of the Home-making department of the Appleton Vocational school will meet at 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon. The curriculum for the coming year will be discussed.

Teachers Meet
In order to show the county board what can be accomplished with lower grade children in music instruction, Dr. Baker had a number of Appleton pupils sing several songs.

STAGE AND SCREEN

ETERNAL TRIANGLE

That ultra-debonair young fellow, Adolph Menjou, diverts his unique artistry and makes fun of the well known eternal triangle in "Blonde or Brunette," his latest Paramount starring vehicle which comes to Fischer's Appleton Theatre 4 days starting next Monday.

Greta Nissen and Arlette Marchal, respectively Norwegian and French charmers, are the triangle's other points. To give the comedy the proper French spice, it being an adaptation of a parisian stage success, "An Angel Passes," the nonchalant Menjou marries them both; not concurrently, of course.

First, he marries Greta in a delicate effort to shake off his wild Paris associates but only succeeds in acquiring a new set of wilder associates. Then both women match wits for his affections. The homely that gentlemen fancy blonde is put to a severe test. The result must be seen to be appreciated.

The climax of the hilarious farce comes when Menjou finds himself stranded with the two women at a country estate. He is divorced from one and married to the other but his hosts are unaware of this and insist on putting him in the wrong room. A special stage presentation, "The Three Ward Girls and an added two real feature the "The Collegians" will be shown.

HERE'S A WOW OF A THRILL-O-DRAMA

Mystery, adventure, love and thrills in generous proportions make up the ingredients of "A Desperate Moment," at the New Bijou Friday and Saturday and a very palatable conception it is.

It is the story of a girl who is taken from a comfortable, even luxurious, existence and thrown upon her mettle at the ends of the earth among a gang of smugglers and cutthroats. Quite a situation — what? Fortunately the hero is along and is a perfect gentleman even in the wilds of a desert island, but nevertheless the pair have a hard time of it before they get back to civilization. This story holds one's interest from start to finish. There is a most thrilling fight aboard ship, and one of the best fires at sea, we have ever seen in a picture. In addition to the thrills, the photography of this sequence is a joy to the eyes.

Wanda Hawley and Theodore Von Eltz in the leading roles give realistic portrayals nicely tinged with humor. Sheldon Lewis is a properly repellent villain and Leo White is good as the white-livered aristocrat who aspires to the hand of the heroine. Each member of the supporting cast deserves commendation. Director Jack Dawn also deserves praise. This is one of the best pictures of its kind we have seen this season. You won't want to miss it.

Eau Claire Matron Tells Good News

Mrs. George Prynech was ill two years. Agonizing stomach cramps and insomnia made life miserable. Could find no relief till she used Tanlac.

Mrs. Prynech, 1110 1/2 E. Madison St., Eau Claire, Wis., is the wife of motorcycle policeman George Prynech. Her two years of suffering are now but a memory. "I had frequent bilious spells," she said, "with violent headaches and bloating. Sleep was out of the question, and my nerves became all unstrung. Eating caused acute distress; even the lightest food was distasteful."

"Nothing seemed to help me, and I grew discouraged. My mother, who lives in Black River Falls had been greatly helped by Tanlac and advised me to try it. My dragging, listless feeling soon disappeared and I picked up rapidly. My appetite came back, and I began to sleep normally once more. In a short time I was my old healthy, firm flesh. I'm in glorious health right now, and recommend Tanlac with pleasure and confidence."

Mrs. Prynech's case is not unique. Many thousands of grateful friends have written to tell us how they won their way to rugged health with the help of Tanlac. Your druggist has it. Over $2,000,000 bottles already sold.

LUTZ STILL THIRD IN VALLEY SCORING

Bobby Testwuide, Sheboygan's forward flash, has an easy lead on scoring honors in the Fox River Valley conference with 63 points. 13 more than his closest rival Herbert of West Green Bay. Lutz of Appleton is next in line with 49, right out of the gate. He has an excellent chance of at least climbing close to the lead Friday night as West white Testwuide is forced to try to score against Manitowoc at Manitowoc. The Manitowoc-Sheboygan game will cut down both team's high scores as that Fishback and Brennan, near Lutz, are not expected to go so good. Lutz, playing against Fond du Lac, and the Fondy stars, Manis and Giebel, also will have to work hard for their points in another hard battle, so that Herbert has the big chance of the weekend.

MALONEY-DELANEY GO THRILLS SPORT FANS

New York—(AP)—Stirred by promise of the most thrilling heavyweight encounter of the season, New York's sport world Thursday talked nothing but "fight" as Jimmy Maloney and Jack Delaney prepared to pull up training camp stakes and head for the scene of their ten round battle Friday night. At Madison Square garden Tex Rickard wrestled with the problem of finding room in an arena that seats 18,000 for 100,000 fans besieging him for tickets. Maloney was reported to have injured his right hand in training at Long Branch, N. J. but the report was false. hols and all the rest giving him the go-by. His last time out he defeated Art Warden, the hard slugging feather weight of Buffalo and when he goes against Aguinaldo he feels confident he will stop Churchill's famous Filipino slugger before the tenth round. Berghaessen has been after Zwick for two months trying to land him on a cane near his home town and has finally succeeded. Zwick will come to Chicago in a day or two and work out at Jim Mullens gym and go to Milwaukee and Appleton in plenty of time to finish up his training.

Kaer, Gridiron Star, Gains Fame On Track

Los Angeles—Morton Kaer was a valuable track athlete at the University of California long before he ever became a valuable member of the football team and later an All-American halfback. Kaer was forced to allow his efforts on track to lag while he was gaining greater fame as a ballplayer. Now young Kaer is eager to surpass his efforts in football by greater performances in his first love, track. When Kaer entered Southern California in 1923, he showed the makings of a four letter man. He pitched on the baseball team, was considered a great track man, worked his way from the fourth floor eleven to the first, and played basketball. During the track season of 1924, his freshman year, he turned in such creditable marks in so many different events that he was entered in the Olympic tryouts. He topped first in the pentathlon event in the trials, went to Paris, and had the distinction of being the only collegian to place. All of this, mind you, despite the fact that he started off his performance with a tooth so badly ulcerated that his jaw was swollen almost to the point of breaking skin. He finished sixth, having placed first in the 220-meter race, second in the javelin and third in the broad jump. Kaer made the football team at Southern California the next year. His play was not brilliant. He next made the basketball team as a forward. But there, if he had any ambitions for four letters, his ambition stopped. The faculty instituted a rule limiting athletes to only two sports. Kaer chose football and track. In 1925 he led the touchdown makers of the nation with 14 markers. But in track he failed to reach the dizzy heights—he was unable to reclaim his gold star. Last fall saw Kaer placed on practically every All-American selection in the nation. Now he wants to reach the same heights in track. Perhaps the wall, at any rate, Coach Glenn Cromwell has hopes that Kaer may be

CHICAGO CLAIMS WALSH SINCE HE WON SOUTH OPEN

Windy City Paper Refers to Frank as "Chicago Pro" in Stories

Since Frank Walsh, pro of the Butte de la Poudre country club, became famous by finishing second to Bobby Cruikshank in the South Central open golf meet at Hot Springs, Ark., last week and finishing high in several other big meets this winter, Chicago sport scribes are beginning to claim him as their own. While it is true that Frank once upon a time was an assistant pro in the Windy city and was born there an article in a Chicago paper this week even went so far as to start, "Frank Walsh, Chicago pro, who tied Joe Turnesa, Al Watrous, Tom Kerrigan and Cyril Walker as runner-up to Bobby Cruikshank in the South Central open," etc. Before Frank won his fame, he was not even mentioned as a former Chicago boy.

Frank-assisted his brother Tom at Olympia Fields in 1922-23 and Cliff Booth at Bryn Mawr in 1923 before coming here. The Chicago story says that Frank is visiting in the Windy City for a couple weeks before going to Atlanta for the $12,000 Southern open from March 23-28. Here's the dope:

"Frank Walsh, a Chicago pro, who tied with Joe Turnesa, Al Watrous, Tom Kerrigan and Cyril Walker as runner-up to Bobby Cruikshank in the South Central open last week at Hot Springs, returned home this week. After a couple of weeks' rest Walsh will go to Atlanta to play in the $12,000 Southern open, March 23-28. In the six tournaments Walsh entered in California, Texas and Arkansas five were remunerative. His portion of the four-way split at Hot Springs was $800.

ONLY ONE CHANGE IN STATE MEET STANDING

Racine—(AP)—Despite a slow finish of 815 the Zuehlke-Stocher Heating five of the Milwaukee Business Mens league scammed into fifth place in the team event of the state tournament in the second shift here Wednesday night with 2562.

The first two games hit 1040 and 1091. On the same squad the Venus Theaters, also of Milwaukee got 2955 on 1,000, 246 and 1,003 to place sixth. R. Priebe and A. Liebscher, Milwaukee were high for the day in the two men division with 1244. Their high middle game of 483 was flanked by games of 399 and 377. Another good 1200 score was registered by the P. Duero-H. Fischer Duo, Milwaukee, who hit 1222. H. Prokop, Milwaukee, had best singles total of the day with 645 on games of 187, 241, 218. Carlsons painters of Racine led the first team shift Wednesday night with 2776.

"SPECS" THINKS CARDS WILL TAKE FLAG AGAIN

New York—George Toporcer, only bespectacled infielder in the majors, thinks the Cardinals have an excellent chance to repeat in the National. "Sure we will miss Horsey," says Toporcer, "but where in either league could you get a better substitute than Frankie Frisch?" "We have the best first sacker in the league and two great young infielders in Thevenow and Bell. No club can get anywhere without a good infield and there is no denying the Cards have that."

BADGER COACH

OSCAR TECKEMEYER

TWIN CITY QUINTETS HIGH IN MAPLE MEET

Minneapolis—(AP)—New teams held the top positions in the five-men and doubles competition at the International Bowling tournament here Thursday.

The Minnesota Dry Cleaners team of St. Paul took possession of the top berth in the five-men events Wednesday by rolling 3,037 a mark exceeded only twice in I. B. A. history. W. B. Foshey Co. No. 1 team, Minneapolis, went into third place with 2,907. Jack Grant and Louis Schmelzer of St. Paul held the top position in the doubles with a total of 1,235.

NEW BADGER FIVE WORKS FOR BUCKS

Combination Which Swamped Chicago Will Face Ohio State Saturday

Madison—Having struck a harmonious combination in his basketball organization, "Doc" McNeill this week bent his efforts to concocting a surprise attack to unravel at Columbus against the Buckeyes. The vacancy left by Ralph Merkel on his graduation early this month evoked a doubtful atmosphere here, and it was widely assumed that the perfect team which the "Little Giant" had organized would miss fire with the absence of Merkel as floor guard. That dubious cloud was blown aside, however, in the Chicago game here last Saturday night when the Wisconsin quintet—composed of Andrews and Behr, forwards Tenhopen, center; and Barnum and Kowalczyk guards—destroyed the carefully planned formations of the Maroon squad and bested the Midway 31 to 20.

By virtue of that sterling victory Wisconsin installed herself concretely for the time being at least, in second place of the race for Western Conference hardwood supremacy. Wisconsin will be unable to match her cage ability against Michigan, who now flourishes undefeated at the head of the Big Ten race, since no games have been arranged between the two institutions this season.

Andrews and Behr were holding their own high basket rating in practice this week. By the close of the week their accuracy is expected to jump another notch. The "find" who can now be relied upon to carry out the smooth trend of Wisconsin's cage performances is Elmer Tenhopen, elongated pivot man, who rang up four field goals against the Maroons last Saturday. "Tenney" occupied the tip-off position several times for Wisconsin earlier in the season, but it was not until late that he began his drive to a prominent position among the Cardinal players.

However staunch the Buckeye scorers may prove themselves in Saturday's tilt, they will have to amass their penetrating powers to a keen edge in order to pass Captain Barnum and "Hank" Kowalczyk, Wisconsin's impenetrable defense combination.

Ohio State will find herself pitted against the strongest quintet Wisconsin has had in years in the fracas at Columbus Saturday. Unless the Buckeyes repeatedly draw on surprising plays and in addition to that muzzle the new Wisconsin quintet, they will have difficulty in knocking Wisconsin from the Conference race.

APPLETON SKATERS WORK FOR TOURNEY

Bertha Bell Will Compete in Senior Girl Events at Madison Meet

Six Appleton skaters are spending the week in hard practice every evening in preparation for the district blade races at Madison on Sunday afternoon. The local skaters who will enter the events at the Capitol city are Percy Sharp, 1924 city champ and 1926 Class A titlist; Clem Kitzinger, 1925 city champ and 1927 Class A winner; Robert Roemer, 1927 champ; Henry Rammer and Walter Bell, consistent winners in city title senior events; Miss Bertha Bell, senior girl champion in 1923 and 1927 Class A winner.

Rammer will enter the short dashes, where he is unbeatable in the valley, with Bell, and Kitzinger, Roemer and Sharp all stars at the distance events up to two-miles, will race in these contests. Miss Bell will race in the senior women's events. The local men also will form a five-man relay squad to contest the challenge of the Madison State Journal's state title for any city. A large cup will be given for this event and another will go to the city whose skaters win the most points in all races. The Appleton group will strive for this and have a good chance to win with Milwaukee excluded, though Madison has some fine skaters. The local men will have to trim Madison bladesmen to win.

ILLINI WHIPS PURPLE TO CLIMB IN BIG TEN

Chicago—(AP)—Illinois easy victory over Northwestern at Urbana Wednesday night raised the Illini a notch in Big Ten basketball standings. Illinois now is tied with Iowa with a .661 percentage having won six games and lost three. Iowa has won four and lost two. Northwestern's 46 to 32 defeat Wednesday night was its seventh in a row.

Columbus Saturday. Unless the Buckeyes repeatedly draw on surprising plays and in addition to that muzzle the new Wisconsin quintet, they will have difficulty in knocking Wisconsin from the Conference race.

Marquette Journalist Fights Through School

Milwaukee—Literally "fighting his way through school," Gregory (Mickey) O'Neill, freshman in the Marquette University College of Journalism, is making them all sit up and take notice when it comes to "box-fighting" in Milwaukee rings.

Mickey came to Marquette from Tulsa, Okla., last fall. He had somewhat of a reputation as a boxer, having won fifteen fights in the South, so was placed in good hands here. Fred Saddy, past master in the game and at present trainer for some of Milwaukee's leading pugilists, took the young Oklahoma lightweight under his wing and he has been sailing along in great style since.

Marquette's fighting Journalist star has appeared in two bouts in Milwaukee. He sparred to a draw with Charley Weber, local veteran, late last fall, and just recently received all the newspaper decision over Johnny Brown, another Milwaukee favorite. Thus, he has been able to satisfy the landlady and the university bursar. Conrad M. Jennings, athletic director at Marquette, was attracted by the little Oklahoma, and has appointed him boxing instructor at Marquette. Thus it is that many now call him Prof. Mickey as he to give his class the inside dope on the gentle art. O'Neill is developing a classy bunch of boxers at Marquette, and local fans are looking forward to the fight card his men will stage early in the Spring.

Before coming to Marquette to study journalism, Mickey was a sports writer on a Tulsa newspaper.

BELOIT FAIRIES SIGN M'AUILLIFFE FOR 1927

Beloit—John McAuliffe, former Beloit college star and at present a member of the Fairies basketball five, has signed for the season of 1927-28. McAuliffe joined the Englewooders recently but at that time signed only for the remainder of the present campaign. His presence in the lineup gives the Beloiters one of the fastest and most brilliant forwards in this section. McAuliffe is a dazzling floor man, a fine shot and a good defensive player. He also has been used at center, the position which he played with the Blue Devil quintets a few years ago. McAuliffe came to the Fairies from the Swendsen Fords of Milwaukee.

SLIGHT HITCH SPOILS TRADE OF BIG STARS

Chicago—The news has just leaked out that a deal involving two of the biggest stars in the American League failed to materialize by the scantiest of margins. Had the proposition gone through, Eddie Collins and Earl Sheely would have gone to St. Louis in exchange for George Sisler and Marty McManis. It is said refusal of Collins to play in any of the western cities of the circuit spoiled the deal after it had been agreed upon.

Waukesha—With their one chance left to gain undisputed title to the Wisconsin-Illinois championship in basketball, Carroll and Carroll's basketball team are extending themselves this week in an attempt to defeat Ripon Friday night in the Ripon gym.

Whether or not Carroll can again claim the college basketball championship of the state lies in the result of the coming fracas. The Orange has been sent through a series of plays and worked strenuously on short passes under the basket. The Carroll frosh was pitted against the varsity for several periods of scrimmage.

The chances of Carroll's victory against Ripon is dependent upon the work of Kemphorn, freshman center, and Bylow, junior center. Both men have attempted during the season but neither has shown an advantage.

Should Carroll trounce Ripon, on the latter's gym, the Waukesha college men would stand excellent chances of repeating last year's mark. Should the locals lose, the championship scrap would resolve into a fight for a tie with the Crimson cagers.

HARVARD CAPTAIN

GEORGEY PLATT

Harvard is out to regain her athletic prestige, somewhat dimmed of late. Harvard feels that Geoffrey Platt, captain of the varsity crew, is the man to do it. Platt and his rowing cohorts already have contested training for the numerous contests they will engage in this season. Naturally they intend to be victorious for the Cambridge school.

BETTER ATTENDANCE AT TRADE SCHOOL

Sharp Decrease in Percentages of Tardy and Absent Students Last Month

Approximately 90 per cent of students enrolled in Appleton Vocational school attended the school sessions regularly in January, records show. There are 356 students, 168 girls and 188 boys enrolled in the school.

The percentage of attendance is larger than previous months, according to Director Herb Heilig, owing to the special work done by J. G. Pfeil, city trustee officer. Mr. Pfeil has been spending an hour at the school each day to explain the compulsory school attendance law to students who are habitually absent or tardy.

Of the 168 girls in school, 8 are full time students, 132 are part time attendants and 35 are half time attendants. Of the 178 boys, 130 attend part time or one day per week, 31 attend half time or two and one half days per week and 17 are apprentices.

The 17 apprentices are learning six trades. They are plumbing, drafting, machine work, mechanical dentistry, printing and wire weaving.

SEND APPLICATION FOR BOY SCOUT CHARTER

Application for the 1927 charter of the Valley council of Boy Scouts of America, with headquarters in Appleton, was forwarded to the national headquarters in New York City Friday by P. O. Ketcher, Valley Scout executive. The council includes Outagamie, Neenah, Menasha and Clintonville.

It will be the seventh consecutive year that the council has registered as a Scout council, Mr. Ketcher said. Of the 108 councils in Region 7 of which Wisconsin is part, all but 12 were registered at national headquarters Friday, Jan. 31, according to C. N. Fennell of Chicago, associate Scout executive of Region 7.

Lee C. Rasey of Minneapolis, Minn., former principle of Appleton high school arrived here Monday night and will spend most of the week visiting at the home of Mr. Joseph Koffend Jr. Mr. Rasey attended the Rotary club meeting Tuesday noon. Mrs. Rasey is to join him here the latter part of the week.

Broken Threads

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE
To the home of PROF and MOLLIE ELWELL in Camdenville, Ind., one night in October, 1898, is brought a woman who had fainted on a train. That night twin girls are born to her and she dies without revealing her name.

The story then moves forward 18 years. The twins have been adopted and named MARGARET and ELIZABETH. They are called RUSTY and BETTY. JIM ELWELL, the son, enlists in the World War. He then discovers that one of the twins loves him.

He is shell-shocked at Sedan and reported dead. Much later he is identified in a New York hospital, where his parents find him with his speech and memory gone. He is like a living dead man.

The day before he is to be taken home he wanders away from his nurse. Late that night he is found in Bellevue hospital with his skull fractured, expected to die. He had been hit by a truck.

The twins are in Indianapolis at the home of their uncle, wealthy JOHN CLAYTON, the master of their identity having cleared while Jim was away. Some time later Mollie writes that Jim will live but his memory is forever gone. She tells them she is bringing him home, can take twins and MARGARET DALTON, their old nurse, go to Camdenville to greet him.

When the Elwells arrive home, the scene is tense as the twins face the blank-minded Jim. WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE
CHAPTER XXV
Dalton sat gently, and took hold of Jim's free hand, pressing it gently between both her own.

Betty, who was still clinging to Jim's other hand, let go, and Rusty threw an arm around her waist.

Martha Dalton led the way with Jim into the other room and to a big chair, away from the merciless glare of the lights. There she helped him to sit down.

He was apathetic, looking at no one. He was dressed, the girls noted, in a light, English tweed, gray suit and wore a low collar with a black bow tie.

"Now," said Martha calmly, "we'll just sit down and talk a while" and let Jim and Mollie get rested. You girls just sit still till you get—get accustomed to things a little better. I won't have you going to pieces here."

"Mr. Henegan," she called to Mike, who moved swiftly into the room at the sound of his name. "I've heard how wonderful you've been and I want to thank you."

"T's all right," said Mike, bashfully. "Jim and I were buddies, you see. That's how I know him."

Mollie and Prof seated themselves close to Jim and Martha. Betty took the chair next to Jim's mother, but Rusty remained standing. They could not, it seemed, keep their eyes away from Jim's face, but things were beginning to adjust themselves in a measure.

Martha Dalton was fighting for time. She wanted to soothe over the next half an hour, if possible, to break the tension and let the twins accustom themselves to the sight of Jim's expressionless face.

"Tell me," she said to Prof, "did you have a nice trip. Are you tired? I have a kettle on the stove and we'll have tea. Did you eat dinner?"

They had, he told her. "But I'd be obliged for a cup of tea—if you don't mind. Martha, Mollie's tired, I know."

"A little," Mollie confessed. The old nurse went to the kitchen and returned presently with a tray of tea. Mollie drank gratefully.

Jim, too, was served with tea. He watched Mollie drink and then slowly sipped himself. The girls refused. "No, thanks, Dady, dear." Their voices, Martha noticed thankfully, were calmer now. Perhaps, she was thinking, they were safe now.

Presently Rusty moved over beside Jim's chair. She tried to look into his eyes, but they were hidden by the lowered lids.

Prof said, gently, "I think Jim is tired, too, dear."

Rusty nodded. She reached down and took one of Jim's hands and began to stroke it slowly.

After a minute or two she looked over toward Betty. "Come here sister," she said, "and let's both talk to Jim as we used to in the old days here in this room."

She turned to Mollie to explain: "I think I'm all right now, Mollie. Betty and I will be careful."

Mollie nodded. "Just so you don't upset him too much, dear."

The two girls seated themselves, each on an arm of Jim's chair and started in, as Rusty expressed it, "to get acquainted with Jim."

But this Jim was a difficult young man to get chummy with. He simply would not respond. His eyes opened, but he would not look at them.

Rusty, finally, tried to raise his chin to look into his eyes and did get a good look at them. He was crying.

"Oh!" she gasped, startled. Betty's lips began to tremble a little and her sister whispered something in her ear.

After a moment Rusty again turned to Mollie.

"Mollie, dear," she said, trying hard to keep from breaking down and crying. "I've asked Betty to get her harp from the next room—we brought it over specially—and sing to Jim. It may—oh, Mollie, it—may—" She stopped, her dark eyes two wells of tears.

Mollie hesitated momentarily and looked at Prof, who nodded. "I think," he said, "it will be all right, dear."

Mike Henegan said, "If you'll excuse me, folks, I'll just move out, on the porch—just for a breath of air."

Prof smiled understandingly. "Certainly, Mike."

Martha Dalton left the room and got the big harp from its corner. She came back presently and stood it in front of Betty, who had seated herself in the chair at Jim's side.

The girl was trembling as though stricken with anague chill.

Mollie Elwell sat hunched forward in her chair, her anxious eyes fixed with a strange intensity on Jim, who seemed to have slumped down into his seat.

Prof Elwell sat up straight, almost rigid. His face was a mask.

Martha Dalton was thinking that never had she seen anything so pitiful as Betty Marvin seated in front of Jim, her trembling hands holding on to the big harp.

"It was a mistake," she whispered hoarsely. But nobody heard her.

And then the strings of the harp vibrated over so softly in a harmonious chord—just, Rusty was thinking, as they had done on that long ago summer night before Jim had gone away to war.

Betty's voice, shaky but infinitely clear and sweet, took up the words. "Oh promise me that some day you and I—"

"Will take our love to some far distant sky."

Jim Elwell was looking at her, still with that strange, baffled expression in his eyes. His face was working and his teeth were biting into his lower lip. Tears had wet his eyes again.

It seemed that he was striving vainly to tell them something—to tell them that yes, he recalled this music; it was familiar to him; he knew.

Betty's voice went on: "And there—" she sang, but the words were shut off in Mollie Elwell's sudden outburst.

"Stop it!" Mollie screamed, and fairly flung herself across the few feet intervening between her and the girl with the harp. Prof sprang to her side, his hands reaching for her, but she twisted out of reach.

"My God!" she was saying. "Stop it! Don't you see what you are doing to him? Can't you see?"

"Mollie!" Prof cried, and Martha Dalton moved quickly to his side, to help him quiet the half hysterical Mollie.

But Mollie was not to be halted. Her fingers had grasped the arms of both girls with a cruel intensity. Betty looked up with a startled exclamation at sight of her white face and Rusty uttered a protest. But Mollie, seemingly possessed of a sudden strength born of hysteria, grabbed both of them and literally pushed and carried them across the room and thrust them between the portieres into the next apartment.

Martha Dalton fluttered in Mollie's wake, but Prof, white to the lips, had sunk into a chair. Jim was slumped still farther back into his seat, his face twitching nervously and the tears streaming down his cheeks.

PREDICT ALDERMEN MUST BATTLE HARD TO KEEP IN OFFICE

Campaign Will Be Interesting if "Prospective" Candidates Run

The campaign for election as aldermen next spring will have plenty of thrills if all the "prospective" candidates make up their minds to get into the race. Steam from the political pot indicates all of the incumbents will have to fight to hold their seats after May 1.

Appleton will elect six aldermen at the spring election, April 5, according to E. L. Williams, city clerk. The primary election will be held March 22 and nomination papers must be filed at least 20 days previous. The last day for filing is March 2. Nomination papers must contain at least 11 signatures of voters living in the ward in which the candidate is seeking office.

Aldermen whose terms expire this spring are Mark Catlin, First ward; P. Earle, Second ward; C. F. Smith, Third ward; R. F. McGillan, Fourth ward; Charles Rose, Fifth ward; J. H. Fiedler, Sixth ward.

All have said that they will be candidates except Catlin, and it is understood that he also will seek reelection.

If Catlin becomes a candidate for reelection in the First ward he may be opposed by Seymour Gonsler, whose name has been suggested for alderman and also for supervisor. Opposition in the Second ward is expected to be but where three candidates, besides P. Earle, incumbent, are said to have thrown their hats in the ring. John Diderich, William Eggert and F. Wettoncel, it is understood, may be candidates.

Frank Groit and W. H. Gmeiner, it is said, will oppose C. F. Smith in the Third ward and William Vander Heyden is said to be considering to enter the race against Charles Rose, incumbent, in the Fifth ward. Frank Gonschock, it is rumored, will enter the fight against Alderman R. F. McGillan of the Fourth ward and Phil. Vogt, according to information, will be a candidate against J. H. Fiedler, present alderman from the Sixth ward.

"You can't say that Mollie Elwell. You said once that we should go on with our plans just as if Jim was dead, but you shan't. Don't you think my heart is broken as well as yours? You say I have no right, but I have as good a right as you."

"I—I have the right of—of a wife's Jim's wife! Hear me? He gave me that right that day in Chicago before he went away. I have our marriage certificate here with me—and sister was a witness to our marriage. Oh, Mollie, you mustn't say what you did. I'm his wife—his wife. Oh, Mollie, Mollie, pity me a little too."

Which girl is Jim's wife? The next chapter tells that—and something stranger.

ACQUIT BREWER IN BADGER TEST CASE

Fort Atkinson Manufacturer Wins Suit in "Wort and Malt Syrup" Trial

Madison—(P)—The Wisconsin test case, which has attracted attention-wide attention, involving the right of an unlicensed brewery to manufacture "wort and malt syrup," was decided in federal court late Tuesday when Judge C. Z. Luse granted the motion for a directed verdict, and Carl Ebner, president of the Ebner Brewing Co., of Fort Atkinson, was found not guilty of the charges against him.

Last summer federal prohibition forces seized large quantities of "wort"—a compound formed by the boiling of malt and hops in water and its concentrated form known as malt syrup.

Samples were sent to Minneapolis and beer was made from the compound by the internal revenue chemists through the addition of yeast and sugar. Counsel for Ebner contended that "wort" could be used for other purposes than that of making beer.

Judge Luse declared that the wort, mash or wash contemplated by the statute means the fermented product and that the goods made and sold by Ebner, although in liquid form had not arrived at the fermentation point and could not produce alcohol unless yeast, sugar or some other product was first added thereto.

Miss Agnes Rossmelss returned to Milwaukee Tuesday after spending the weekend visiting relatives here.

Goodyear's New Balloon Tire

The Tire shown here is the famous Goodyear All Weather Tread, scientifically redesigned for balloon tire use. The first advantages of this new tread are traction and resistance to skidding. The sharp-edged, diamond-shaped blocks are placed in a semi-flat design so that they not only grip the road, but they retain their usefulness longer than any non-skid tread ever before tried. The second advantage is long, slow, even tread wear. And with these virtues of traction, non-skid and long wear, this new tread is perfectly quiet and does not produce the vibration of many non-skid designs.

ATTENDS BREEDERS' MEET AT OCONOMOWOC

Greenville.—R. J. Schaefer, one of the big breeders of purebred cattle in this vicinity, went to Oconomowoc Monday to attend a convention of state Holstein breeders on Tuesday and Wednesday.

The United States was out of debt only once in its history—during Andrew Jackson's administration, in 1835.

LITTLE CLOVER SEED FOR BADGER FARMS

Prof. Graber Suggests Substitution of Alfalfa During Current Year

Madison.—(AP)—With the scarcity of clover seed resulting in decreased acreage in Wisconsin and an accompanying rise in price, L. P. Graber of the University of Wisconsin's agricultural school, advocates immediate purchase of other crop seeds in order to insure higher quality and more production to offset the clover seed dearth.

Severe winters, depleted organic content in the soil and the restrictions placed upon imported seed have combined to create the scarcity, Professor Graber declared.

"The clover seed situation is extremely serious the country over, especially in Wisconsin, because of the scarcity of good seed. The present quotations for the seed are twice as high as normal. A few years ago a similar shortage would have been a calamity but now it may prove to be a blessing in disguise.

ALFALFA IS SUPERIOR

"Never before has the stock of other crop seeds been so plentiful in Wisconsin, alfalfa, for instance, being cheaper than normal quotations. In my opinion alfalfa is the superior crop and an enormous acreage will be planted this spring.

"By distributing the demand for alfalfa seed over a longer period, rather than confining its purchase to a few weeks before planting time, the farmers will be able to secure a superior quality at a lower price. Approximately 450,000 acres of alfalfa were cut in the state during the past year."

He's Success As Father, Farmer And Cheese-Maker

BY W. F. WINSEY
Special Farm Writer
Seymour.—William Vanden Heuvel, route 6, who formerly lived 45 years in Brown-co and later 9 years in Oconto now owns and manages a 700 acre farm and the Pine Grove Cheese factory, both near here, and has done so for the past 11 years. He is a big farmer, a big cheese factory man and a famous dad, as he is the father of 18 children, all living, healthy and doing well. At the present time, five sons and two daughters and his wife are at home on the farm with him.

When Mr. Vanden Heuvel started out as a farmer something like 45 years ago near Green Bay his total cash was $200. From that time beginning, he has built up his present business. He could do this because he is exceedingly strong in a combination of hog raising and dairying. About coupling the two latter industries together, Mr. Vanden Heuvel says, "It is difficult for a farmer to make a success of either one of these industries if it is not supported by the other. Hogs turn the waste and by products of dairying into cash. Very soon I shall dispose of 500 head of hogs and have been feeding on whey thickened with ground feed and corn. Without the hogs to eat the whey, the whey would have been wasted and I would have no chance of seeing that special $500." He is now feeding whey to 65 hogs.

In dairying, Mr. Vanden Heuvel uses 110 head of good grade Holstein cattle including 88 cows 60 of which he is now milking. From the 60 cows he is getting daily 1,800 pounds of milk and in the peak of the flow, last summer, from 75 cows he got 600 pounds of milk testing 3.4 per cent. Besides supplying his house and feeding calves whole milk, Mr. Vanden Heuvel sold $10,000 worth of milk last year. He raises his best calves and weans the balance. He buys and sells from 40 to 50 cows each year.

To feed these cattle and hogs, Mr. Vanden Heuvel, last year, raised 200 tons of mixed red clover and timothy hay, 1,000 bushels of barley and 2,000 bushels of oats and 60 acres of corn. In order to make 200 tons of hay, he had a surplus of 200 tons to sell, for yields, last year were much below the average. This winter he will market only 50 tons of hay. Two hundred acres supplied wild pasture to his herd last summer. He put in corn crop in four large silos. He bought commercial dairy feed and oil meal, and ground small grain, grown on the farm and used all as a sort of an extra ration for his cattle.

The Pine Grove Cheese factory, owned and managed by Mr. Vanden Heuvel, did a $57,000 business, last year for 30 patrons. At the close of the year the following report was sent out to the patrons:

"Number of pounds of milk, 2,755,424; cheese, 269,273 pounds; pounds of butterfat, 100,388; money received for cheese, $35,761.51; received for whey cream, $3,557.00; total money received, $39,318.51; expense for making cheese, $7,425.64; money paid to patrons, $31,892.87; average test of all milk, 3.6; average price of butterfat, 49.65 cents; average price received for cheese, 20 cents; average price paid for 100 pounds of milk, $1.73; pounds of milk used to make a pound of cheese, 10.34.

In the flush season this factory took in 12,000 pounds of milk daily, but is taking in only 5,000 pounds now.

LOUIS HANSON IN DAIRYING BUSINESS FOR THIRTY YEARS

Recently Lost Eight Animals—Is Rebuilding Herd from Own Stock

BY W. F. WINSEY
Special Farm Writer
Green Bay.—With varying degrees of success and failure he has been in the dairy business in his present location, the past 30 years.

Starting with a herd of native cattle, Mr. Hanson gradually changed to a herd of high class grades and later, as rapidly as possible, to the best Holstein purebreds, breeding and production records considered, that he could buy. His failure came from the loss of six of his choicest animals through the fire. He lost a short time ago, and two other animals through rabies.

Rather than to go to the expense of completely filling the ranks in his herd by purchase, Mr. Hanson bought a few animals, retained a few heifers he intended to sell and is now raising all his heifer calves. He has now five of the choicest calves a few weeks old, from this vicinity. Excellent breeding and whole milk has made them shapely, and their coats as sleek as silk. The chances are that in a few years, Mr. Hanson from his own breeding will have a better herd than he could have gotten by snap purchases from other breeders.

CHEAPER TO RAISE OWN

Mrs. Hanson describes their plight in these words: "The T. B. test and the rabies made deep inroads in our herd. But five heifers we had raised, partially took the places of our lost animals and we have five more heifers coming from this vicinity. The prices are very high it was much more economical for us to do as we did than it would have been to have replaced our losses by the purchase of adult cows. To accomplish our purpose, we are now raising all our heifer calves."

In 1912, Mr. Hanson bought his first purebred Holstein herd sire from A. L. Williams, Fond du Lac. Since that purchase, he has had a purebred sire on his farm continuously. His present sire is Sir Ormsby Abbecker Korndyke 31st, 2 years old. His dam is Longfield Canary Helen. One of his two heifer dams has a record of 33 pounds of butter. Sir Ormsby is from the herd of the Brown County asylum. Mr. Hanson already has six outstanding calves from this sire.

At the time that Mr. Hanson bought his first herd sire from A. L. Williams, he also bought the purebred cow, Pearl Keyes Hengerveld from the same breeder. In 1916, he bought Edna Pontie Sadie Julip 5th, from Fred Harford, Kaukauna. Autumn Belle Keyes Hengerveld, 10 years old was raised on the farm. So was Mabel Keyes Hengerveld, 9 years old, and Pauline Keyes Hengerveld De Kol.

Sir Ormsby, Mr. Hanson's herd sire is a calf from first place at the Brown and Winnago-co fairs and first place as a yearling at the Brown-co fair.

29 PUREBRED ANIMALS

In his herd, Mr. Hanson now has 29 purebred animals among which number are 19 cows. Including strippers, he is now milking 12 cows. In a short time he will be milking the 19.

While Mr. Hanson is raising and caring for purebred cattle in which his wife is very much interested, Mrs. Hanson is raising purebred White Leghorn chickens. She now has a flock of 200 birds. Her flock is made up of the survivors of state and local exhibitions. A state exhibitor, who has a flock each November and a La Plant Hatchery takes all her eggs at certain seasons of the year for hatching purposes. Mrs. Hanson does not force egg production except in the spring. In the spring her 200 birds produce 170 eggs daily as a rule.

Don't Over-Look Value Of Skim-Milk, Urges Tubbs

BY W. F. WINSEY
Special Farm Writer
Seymour.—"Skim-milk produced on a dairy farm and fed to calves and hogs, brings in almost as much cash as does the sale of cream," says Frank W. Tubbs, a dairyman, route 1, "beside retaining soil fertilizers on the farm for which substitutes are very expensive."

There really is no way of estimating the value of the products of skim-milk in one form or another as soil fertilizers, but Mr. Tubbs last year sold $1,540 worth of hogs and $185 worth of calves and raised five calves. If he lacked a supply of skim milk, both of these sources of revenue would have been partially closed or blocked altogether.

Mr. Tubbs' cream sales from 17 cows last year totaled $2,542.57 and his sales of cows and calves totaled $760. He belonged to the Cicero, Black Creek Cows' Testing association last season and his herd was the highest production herd of the association. Below is the production record:

Eighteen cows, milk produced 174,670 pounds, total amount of butterfat 5,538 pounds; value of product valued at 61 cents a pound, $2,828.71; cost of feed including pasture, $1,511.40; value of product above cost of feed, $1,317.31.

Some of the big producing cows of the herd last year are: Esther, grade cow, 7 years old; 12,363 pounds of milk in 253 days; 374 pounds of butterfat; best day's milk 70 pounds; test 3.5; profit $109.20.

Alice, grade cow, 6 year old, 14,140 pounds of milk in 365 days; 395 pounds

DAIRY IMPORTS SET NEW POST-WAR PEAK

Exceeded Exports Last Year by Equivalent of 500 Million Pounds of Milk

Imports of butter, cheese, and condensed milk into the United States last year, exceeded exports by the equivalent of more than 500,000,000 pounds of milk, and established a new post-war peak in volume of net imports, according to estimates by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, United States Department of Agriculture. Net imports in 1926 were equivalent to 214,000,000 pounds of milk.

Butter imports and exports were nearly balanced last year, until December, when the price of butter at New York exceeded that at London enough to permit more than 2,000,000 pounds to enter this country, even over the tariff.

Total imports of cheese aggregated 18,416,823 pounds for the year, and to exports only 2,597,537 pounds; leading to a net import of 15,819,286 pounds which is equivalent to 745,142,260 pounds of milk. Net exports of condensed and evaporated milk totaled only 118,000,000 pounds for the year, as against more than 526,000,000 pounds in 1919.

Exports of condensed and evaporated milk decreased markedly since the war, and cheese imports have increased. A large quantity of the cheese imported is made up of foreign types or special varieties, but a large quantity of Cheddar cheese is included.

Production of cheese in the United States last year is estimated at only slightly below that in 1925, but net imports increased more than 21,000,000 pounds. Canada contributed 11,855,132 pounds in 1926 against 204,695 pounds in 1925, most of it coming in during the latter half of the year on account of low prices of cheese abroad, especially in England.

Most of the Canadian cheese was used by the manufacturers of processed cheese. The imports from Canada displaced domestic cheese and depressed prices during the period of importation.

OVER-POPULATION IS PROBLEM IN EUROPE

Land Resources Inadequate for Support of People, Professor Says

Columbus, O.—Over-population in proportion to land resources is Europe's chief agricultural problem, said A. R. Mann, dean of the New York State College of Agriculture, in a talk delivered at the Farmers' Week at Ohio State university.

Dean Mann recently returned from two years' service as director of the agricultural activities of the International Board in Europe. His headquarters were in Rome and Paris and his studies carried him into nearly all of the countries on the continent.

"We have in the United States a density of population of 14.1 persons per square kilometer," said Dean Mann in comparing populations.

"Omitting the most northern countries, where climate restricts population, the density ranges from 70.3 persons per square kilometer in Poland to 251.3 in Belgium.

"There have been attempts, not as yet strikingly successful, to redistribute smaller parcels of land into profitable farming units. There is a five-acre area in Switzerland which contains 56 different properties divided into 56 pieces of land. Thirty-four different families till 56 fields on these five acres.

"Machine methods in agriculture are not likely to make much headway in European countries where fields are small and greatly subdivided.

"It is of no purpose to argue that the peasant should lay aside his hand tools and resort to machine methods so as to enable him to work more acres when it is quite impossible for him to obtain more land.

"Co-operative associations, both among consumers and producers, have reached a high development in many parts of Europe. Consumers' co-operatives, though, often outgrown in importance the producers' selling agencies."

G. R. SCHAEFER AT BANK MEETING IN ST. PAUL

Greenville.—George R. Schaefer, manager of the Federal Land Bank, met Tuesday and Wednesday, Mr. Schaefer is an officer of the bank.

certificate is good for one year from date of test, unless revoked at an earlier date.

What Dr. Madison has in mind is his advice to dairymen of Outagamie-co is that having taken the first step toward getting the certificate of "Tuberculosis Accredited Herd," from the state that they do not fail to take each of the remaining steps of the succession as rapidly as the state will permit them.

LIST OF ACCREDITED HERDS

Bulletin No. 61, issued by the Wisconsin State Department of Agriculture, contains a list of all the accredited herds of the state up to July 1, 1925. This is one of the bulletins that out-of-state cattle buyers use when visiting the state to buy dairy cattle and the kind of a bulletin, as it is a great advertisement, that Dr. Madison wishes to have contain the name of every dairyman in Outagamie-co who has been successfully subjected to two consecutive tests with tuberculosis, applied at intervals of not less than six months, the first interval dating from the time of removal of the tuberculous animals from the herd. Rule No. 10, states: "Strict compliance with these methods and rules shall entitle the owners of tuberculous-free herds to a certificate. 'Tuberculosis Free Accredited Herd,' to be issued by the bureau of animal industry and the state livestock sanitary authority. The

DON'T OVER-PLANT POTATO CROP THIS YEAR, IS WARNING

U. S. Bureau Declares Reports Indicate 13 Per Cent Larger Acreage

BY W. F. WINSEY
Special Farm Writer
The United States Bureau of Agricultural Economics, market news service, on Feb. 1, under the caption, "The Potato Outlook," sent out the following statement of acreage and crops for 1925 and 1926 and estimates of the acreage and yield for 1927:

"After the relatively limited potato acreage of the past few years and after the short crops and favorable prices of 1925 and 1926, there seems to be some danger of over-planting this season. Early reports from many sections indicate a possible increase of 13 per cent in the 1927 potato acreage. With average yield of 112 bushels per acre, such an increase of plantings would result in a 400,000,000 bushel crop, or only 21,000,000 less than the high production in 1924, and growers doubtless would receive low prices. The disastrous season of 1924-1925 should be a warning against any increase of acreage as great as 13 per cent after the very few production and poor returns of that season, plantings were reduced in 1925 to the lowest total in 20 years. Since 1925, the tendency has been to increase the potato acreage annually and bring it back to normal. The decrease in 1926 and the increase last year were noticeable in both the early and late states. Production also followed this trend in both the south and the north. In other words, after a short-crop year, heavier plantings in the early-shiping sections seem to be a sure indication of a proportionately larger acreage throughout the north or main-crop states. This coincided with the action of growers in the two sections of the country leads to the feeling that matters may be overdone this year.

"Not only is heavier planting of potatoes reported in Florida, but the acreage of the crop in the lower Rio Grande valley of Texas appears to be exceptionally large. It is estimated that 14,000 to 15,000 acres have been planted to potatoes in the valley this year, compared with 6,300 last season. Favorable weather made it possible to put out potatoes several weeks earlier this year than usual and plantings were nearly completed on Feb. 1. If growing conditions prove good, this crop will be moving to market early, possibly starting by the middle of March. In case other states of the south follow the example of Florida and Texas, it is reasonably sure that old potatoes will begin to meet competition at the opening of spring."

LITTLE CHANGE AT DALE

At Dale, one of the centers of the potato-raising industry of Outagamie-co, the growers' plant about the same acreage each year, according to John Leppa, a potato dealer, and there will be but very little departure from the rule this spring.

While most of the growers still have a few potatoes on hand, the total is not very large. Of two dealers in town, one has very few potatoes and the other has 700 bushels. Forty-one cars of potatoes were shipped from Dale so far this season. The price paid growers a short time ago was $1.35 a hundred.

Potatoes were injured by dry rot last fall which, beside the loss, caused lots of handling by growers and dealers. If the potatoes stored since then after grading, in sacks, it was usually found necessary to sort them again before shipping.

According to Mr. Leppa, dry rot can be controlled to a considerable extent by treating the seed and spraying the vines. About Dale, Mr. Leppa says that potato growers use only home-produced fertilizer on their potato fields. He is of the opinion, that where they are short on home fertilizers, they could materially increase their yields by the use of the commercial fertilizers that have been used extensively in other potato raising districts.

try, and has otherwise complied with the regulations governing the work."

The purpose of the bulletin is, "The numerous requests by prospective purchasers justify the publication of the results of this work (tuberculin testing of cattle). This bulletin is a medium for bringing into contact prospective purchasers and breeders who are making an earnest effort to maintain and market tuberculous-free cattle. The following list shows herds accredited to date, together with those that have passed successfully one test without reactors, with a view to certification. The different breeds of cattle and the names of owners are arranged in alphabetical order."

WHEN YOU DON'T WANT TO EAT Or What you Eat Hurts or Makes you Sick

Try a little diapsin. It's powerful in the stomach—contains real digesters that lend a hand to do the work a strong and healthy stomach would do naturally. It digests such foods as fresh bread, pastry and rich cake. It enables you to get away with sausage baked beans or mince pie.

But no matter what you eat, even if you can't digest milk or meat makes you bilious, or your stomach gets kassy, with heartburn or sour risings, diapsin almost instantly makes your stomach sweet, absorbs the gas, makes you feel comfortable and enables you to digest and empty the stomach on time and ready for the next meal.

Get a 60 cent package of Pape's Diapsin at any drug store. It will surely bring your stomach comfort.

TOWN OF CENTER MAN WILL CONSTRUCT SILO

John L. Burke of the town of Center, has started hauling gravel for a new silo to be built on his farm this spring.

Work will start as soon as the weather is mild enough to pour concrete. Production of dairy products in Canada is now at the $300,000,000 level with exports running to $57,000,000 annually. The eastern half of Canada produces 98 per cent of the cheese and 71 per cent of the butter.

WALL-PAPER DESIGN FOR EVERY ROOM IN HOME, SAYS AVERY

Exact Effect Desired May Be Created by Proper Selection of Decoration

Special to Post-Crescent.
New London.—That wall-paper retains its usefulness and charm for the home, and that for the coming season no other treatment of wall decoration will be so popular as brought out by E. T. Avery, local decorator upon his return from Milwaukee where he attended the annual international convention of the Master Painters and Decorators held in that city last week.

"The usefulness of paper as a wall decoration is obvious," stated Mr. Avery, "but wall paper as a corrective agent may be novel to many householders. Nevertheless, very sound logic underlies the use of paper to correct either the architectural or decorative shortcomings of interior walls. Certain papers can be relied upon to lessen the apparent height of walls which are over-high; other papers apparently augment the height of walls which are too low."

"One new paper that would be splendid for the high ceiling dining room, or hall, has a soft cream background, divided into decided squares over which a vine rambles realistically. There is sufficient life in the tumbling leaves and the blossoms lightly touched with dull blue, flame and yellow to avoid monotony."

For the low ceiling room there are well defined stripes, and the exquisite silver and gold shades, the pattern of fine vertical lines suggestive of heavy watered silk. For attic rooms, or rooms of story and a half, homes much broken by windows and doors, plain effects are excellent, with woodwork painted or enameled to match the walls and to coordinate the less conspicuous. Stippled patterns here provide an interesting solution and there are also the fabric mottled and other texture surfaced papers which answer admirably.

Yea, Verily! Marbles Are Harbingers Of Spring

New London.—Little boys, caps rakishly worn with visors to the rear, kneel in mud and slush of city walks' yelling "salt and pepper! Let 'er go! You'll never hit it! Aw, you couldn't hit the broadside of a barn! Aw, ya never did. Aw, ya did too, seen ya?" Hands grimy and chapped, voices husky, they sit, legs spread wide, or crouched on one knee, or a la spread-eagle, tongues between parted lips, and eyes shrewdly squinted.

Middle-sized boys wearing sodden, shapeless shoes, hoarsely yell: "Hoo-doo! hoo-doo! Oh boy a five blocker! Each step they take is accompanied by a liquid sound. Squish! squish! says each shoe to its neighbor, emitting jets of icy water. They congregate there by the sunny walk, or at the turn of the walk, or just anywhere at all, and where they congregate there are intent silences, clamorous harangues, and—fights. For marble season is here and spring is on the way.

"Will you pick these things up, or shall I sweep them up?" mother has been impatiently waiting to know for the past two weeks as she periously coasted about on the less treasured "mbs." Silence in the school room has broken by the sudden clatter of marbles which, surreptitiously handed under cover of the desk slipped their mooring to go rolling in every direction. Teacher has a choice collection locked in her desk.

But the game itself! Little is known of the origin of marbles and who played the game first. No one seems to know whether the rules of the game have changed since those first centuries when marbles—beautiful, seductive marbles first led the boys to "play for keeps."

An early 17th century writer tells of a visit to Westminster abbey. During his visit the archdeacon pointed out to him the little holes and grooves worn in the flag stones by the choir boys of the cathedral—choir boys who sang in England before the discovery of America.

It is believed that Germany knew the game, and Italy. Most of the marbles made today come from Germany, where labor is cheap. The hand-made agates, most prized of all, are made in Oberstein, Germany, of agate ground or grained, by hand. One pottery in Oberstein turns out as many as 100,000 daily by machinery. These of porcelain are made in moulds, glazed and colored, then baked, like china dishes.

Marbles are of glass, agate, china, porcelain, marble and the small mbs, used to hit the prized conchoids are of clay, baked and painted.

The process of making marbles from the rough stone is begun when the rough stone is broken into fragments. The small bits are put into grooved iron moulds. An oak slab fits over these indentations and a small stream of water is played over the whole so that the material may not become too hot. The bits of stone are kept moving and when finished are rounded and polished. Porcelain marbles are formed in the same way.

Glass marbles are made by taking up little bits of melted glass on the end of an iron rod and dropping it into the moulds which shape the marbles. Figures of flowers, dogs, horses and kittens are fixed on the end of the rod. The melted glass flows about the figure and when the marble is finished the figure is on the inside. Colored glass marbles are made by taking glass rods of different colors and melting them over a flame. The worker, when the material has reached the proper consistency stirs the mass slightly and it is then pressed into a mould. Thus the lovely ribbons of color are formed with in the finished marble.

Why Auburn Increases Wheelbase

All of the finer European cars have long wheelbase, such as Isotta Fraschini, Mercedes, Minerva and Panhard, etc.

All of the finer American cars have long wheelbase, such as Lincoln, Duessenberg, Cadillac, Pierce-Arrow, etc.

The leading international engineers, who design the world's best Automobiles, of greatest luxury and comfort, all agree that there is no substitute for wheelbase.

The real advancement today lies in a modernized car that retains long wheelbase.

The experience of millions of motorists over a period of years has raised the standard by which the motoring public measures cars.

Auburn meets this demand, not with freak or experimental types of cars, but in using the known, proven requisites for fine car service and in building better, more advanced cars upon those sound engineering foundations.

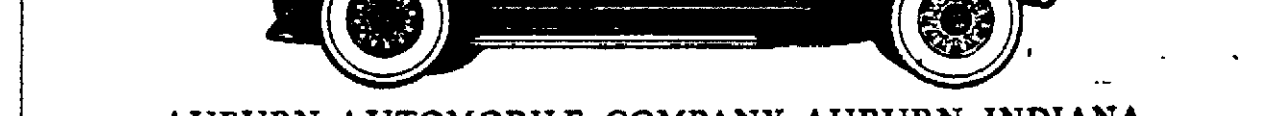

Lower cars, easier to handle, more comfortable, less effort to drive!

Auburn marks the turning-point from the old-style, top heavy, cumbersome extravagant types of cars that formerly represented luxury.

But, Auburn in producing this new type of car, did not discard or go contrary to the lessons that accumulated experience has taught. Instead, Auburn gives larger motor, greater power and speed, stronger frame, better material and finer workmanship in a car of longer wheelbase.

In this way, Auburn builds value—value that endures through prolonged service—value that insures quick and high re-sale turn-over!

See the Auburn, compare it, drive it, and if it does not sell itself, you will not be asked to buy.

PUBLIC MUST MAKE UP ITS MIND BUSSES WILL STAY ON ROADS

Former Highway Commission Secretary Urges Policy of "Live and Let Live"

Madison—(AP)—The public utilities are on the high seas. They might as well reconcile themselves to that fact and pursue the policy of "live and let live," Mr. W. Torkelson, former engineer-secretary of the state highway commission, said in a current issue of "Badger Highways," the highway commission's magazine.

"Since the extensive improvement of highways began following the advent of the motor vehicle," the article continued, "the presence of public utilities within the highway right of way, has in many cases, increased the difficulty of carrying out highway improvements. With the development, which is inevitable, not only in the use of motor vehicles, but in public utilities as well, the friction between highway authorities and managers of public service corporations must intensify unless some policy is adopted by which both can develop."

"When Wisconsin was admitted in the union in 1848, there was not a railroad in the state. All commodities produced were transported over the highways to some place where water transportation was available. The principal agricultural product, was hauled as far as 100 miles to be shipped by boat from some lake port or river landing. Lead, mined in the southwestern part of the state, was hauled even greater distances to Milwaukee."

WIRES ON ROADS
At that time the telegraph was invented and was proving itself a practical device for transmitting messages. The only feasible way to make use of this invention was to stretch the wires along the highways. The last territorial assembly of Wisconsin in 1848 passed an act which granted to persons, but not corporations, the right to maintain lines of telegraph wires along public roads, and across rivers. This right was limited by a provision that such use was not to incommode the public in the use of the highways.

"When a new mode of using public streets and highways is adopted the question arises of whether it violates the rights of owners of the fee to the streets and is inconsistent with the original design in setting the land aside for a public thoroughfare. We must keep in mind the fact that streets as well as laws must keep abreast with the march of civilization, with the growth of population and consequent increase of travel. Lands are set aside for highways, not for the present, but for all time, with the added demands in the course of natural development."

"With this situation confronting us, it seems the only practical course is to reconcile ourselves to the fact that public utilities and highways will always be linked together. It cannot in the nature of things be otherwise. Their right to be there has been recognized by our legislature and to move their plants would entail a vast expense which would be bound to be reflected in their rates. They would be forced to acquire a private right of way, in many cases by condemnation. Public opinion would never support any measure which would force their general removal from the highways."

"We must adopt a policy by which we will have highways adequate for purposes of travel and, at the same time, afford the public utilities the necessary room. Practically all our roads must be widened and the sooner this is taken care of the better. It may seem at first thought that the utilities should be required to pay a portion of the cost of widening; but in my opinion, the advisability of such a course is doubtful. In the first place it would complicate the procedure, but the most serious objection is that if this were done it would in all probability give utilities the right to maintain their structures immovable in the highways unless some change therein were made at public expense."

"As things now are, highway officials, in Wisconsin, have the upper hand, but they should realize they owe the utilities a decent consideration. Every expense the utilities are put to must in the long run be reflected in their rates and the public must pay. The thing to do now is to inaugurate a policy already mentioned, namely, to make present provision for future expansion."

Marshall Graff, district representative of the University of Wisconsin Extension division, returned Wednesday from Clintonville. He will leave Thursday for a business trip to Green Bay and Sturgeon Bay.

TO WITHDRAW PLAY ON BROADWAY STAGE

Manager Agrees to Cease Production of "The Captive" After Criticism

New York—(AP)—Shortly before time for the legal curtain to rise on a "courtroom matinee" of "The Captive," one of three plays raided in last week's stage cleanup campaign, producers of the production announced that they had decided it would be "unwise and impolitic" to continue the run of the play.

The casts of "sex" and "The Virgin Man" already are held under bail for hearing in special sessions, and Tuesday Magistrate Renaud ruled that the 12 members of "The Captive" cast must appear for arraignment Wednesday despite the fact that this would necessitate cancellation of a $2,500 matinee performance.

Three hours before time for the court hearing, Gilbert Miller, managing director for the Charles Frohman Co., producers of "The Captive," issued a statement announcing cessation of production. He based the decision on "strong criticism in some quarters," but reiterated his belief that the play was a fine production worthy of the best traditions of the stage and asserted that the authorities had been grossly unfair "to class The Captive with plays of less distinguished character."

Miller said that at Wednesday's court "matinee" Magistrate Renaud will be requested to drop the complaint against members of "The Captive" cast in return for voluntary withdrawal of the play after Wednesday night's performance.

My Beauty Aids for You

By Edna Wallace Hopper
I offer you my premier beauty aids. They have cost me 40 years of searching, 35 trips to France, and at least $100,000. Today, at every toilet counter, they are placed at your command.

They brought me a glorious career as a beauty on the stage, and that career continues. Women who see me daily envy my youthful bloom.

My major help is my White Youth Clay. Not an ordinary clay, but the final result of 20 years of scientific study. It is white, refined and dainty. It combines with two clay-somes of the other best helps known for beauty and youth and complexion.

I have seen my White Youth Clay bring to countless girls, inside 30 minutes a new beauty which amazed them. Older women seem to drop ten years. No lover of youth and beauty, when she learns the results, can neglect it.

My White Youth Clay purges the skin of all that clogs or mars it. It draws out the cause of blackheads or blemishes. It brings the blood to the skin to nourish and revive it. The result is a rosy afterglow which amazes and delights. It combats all lines and wrinkles, reduces enlarged pores. I never knew a product which did so much so quickly.

Any girl or woman can gain new beauty or new youth and complexion of my White Youth Clay. Often the results will seem unbelievable. My example shows how those results continue and increase. Please try it. Any toilet counter supplies Edna Wallace Hopper's White Youth Clay at 50c and $1. Or the coupon will bring you a trial free, also my Beauty Book. You will always thank me for this offer.

TEACHER IN HIGH SCHOOL IS VOTED LEAVE OF ABSENCE

Robert Grant to Spend Remainder of School Year in Oshkosh Normal

Robert Grant of the manual training department at Appleton high school was granted a leave of absence for the remainder of the school year at a special meeting of the board of education at the superintendent of schools office Tuesday afternoon. He will take a position in Oshkosh normal school which will consist of part time teaching and a semester's work toward his bachelor's degree. This will save the teacher six or eight summer school terms of work toward the degree.

The Appleton man will take the place of an Oshkosh instructor who is on a leave of absence to do special work in industrial lines, it was said. A substitute for Mr. Grant was discussed but no definite contract has been made.

The iron stoker discussed at the regular meeting Friday evening will be installed at Roosevelt junior high school for trial, the board voted. The No. 5 stoker suggested at that meeting however, was changed to a No. 5 A. as the demonstrator said that the larger automatic fireman would so increase the radiator capacity that there would be no excuse for using the second boiler at the school even with some additions to the present

It's Your Duty to Aid Him To Grow Strong, Active and Sound in Body and Mind

That little boy or girl of yours—that doesn't weigh enough—that isn't strong—has no appetite—lacks vigor and is perhaps backward, listless and timid.

What are you going to do with him? Have you ever heard of McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets sugar coated and as easy for ailing children to take as Candy? Every druggist in America sells them—60 tablets, 60 cents—and the supremely good combination of up-building agents surely does help the are expected to be covered by the meetings. Local pastors will speak and special music will be on the meeting programs. One meeting a week probably will be held at each plant. The meetings will be held during the noon hours. Letters were sent out Wednesday by Mr. Werner to local firms to get their consent to hold the meetings. When the answers have been received the committee will work out a schedule.
